Upside-Down Economies

A new study by the Council of State Chambers of Commerce reveals that the United States is now upside-down. It is estimated that the total construction of the continental high dam on the Boulder River at Hahn, Colo., is now under way. It will be the largest ever taken the world since the Federal government took over the TVA area.

Confidence in Business and Jobs Across The U. S. A. At High Level
By KENNETH FINK, DIRECTOR

Princeton, N. J., June 22.—A new study made confidence in the nation's business and jobs is at a high level, according to a survey conducted by the National Bureau of Economic Research. The survey shows that more than three out of every four Americans expect the business situation to improve in the next few months. This is the highest confidence since the survey was first conducted in 1927. The study also shows that the public is more confident in the government's ability to handle the economic situation. This confidence is based on the fact that the government has taken effective action to stabilize the economy and create jobs. The study also shows that the public is more confident in the future of the country. This confidence is based on the fact that the country is now on a path of recovery and growth. The study is a significant indicator of the public's mood and confidence in the nation's future.

The Greatest Danger of All

A new Hoover Commission report deals with the problem of government-owned and operated utilities. The report states that the greatest danger of all is the loss of public control over these utilities. The report recommends that the government should take steps to ensure that these utilities remain in the public interest. This includes the establishment of a public utility commission to oversee the operations of these utilities. The report also recommends that the government should take steps to ensure that these utilities are operated in a fair and equitable manner. Heaviest Rain of Season Fell Friday: Peter Gey Catches 37 Pound Cat-Fish

Thursday, June 21, 1935
A heavy rain fell over the entire region of the state on Friday, June 21, 1935. The rain was the heaviest of the season to date. It was accompanied by strong winds and a heavy overcast. The rain was much needed for the crops and the soil. It was also a great day for fishing. Peter Gey caught a 37 pound cat-fish in the Kentucky River. This is the heaviest cat-fish ever caught in the state. The fish was a real prize and will be on display in the state museum.

Tid Bits Of Kentucky Folklore

By Don Corbin Wilson
"KNOW HIM WHEN"
One of the most curious things about the world is the fact that people who are known to each other in one part of the world are often unknown to each other in another part. This is especially true in the case of Kentucky. There are many people who are well known in one part of the state but are almost unknown in another part. This is due to the fact that the state is so large and so diverse. There are many different cultures and customs in different parts of the state. This makes it difficult for people to know each other. However, it is important to know each other. This is especially true in the case of Kentucky. A LITTLE YAPPING

By Nellie Crum
Happy Birthday To You
The birthday of the state of Kentucky is celebrated every year on June 20th. This is the day when the state was admitted to the Union. It is a day of great pride and joy for all Kentuckians. The state has a long and rich history. It has been a part of the Union since 1792. It has played a significant role in the development of the country. It has produced many great leaders and heroes. It has been a source of inspiration and strength for the people of the United States. The birthday of the state is a day to be proud of and celebrated. It is a day when we can look back on the many achievements of the state and the people who have made it what it is today. It is a day when we can look forward to the future of the state and the people who will continue to make it a great and glorious one.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor: I have read with interest your article on the new study by the Council of State Chambers of Commerce. It is a very interesting and informative article. It shows that the public is more confident in the nation's business and jobs than it has been in many years. This is a very encouraging sign. It shows that the public is more confident in the government's ability to handle the economic situation. This confidence is based on the fact that the government has taken effective action to stabilize the economy and create jobs. The study is a significant indicator of the public's mood and confidence in the nation's future.

NO COMMENT

By Walter Chambliss, Jr.

No Comment on Labor Political Contributions
The Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources has received a report from the National Labor Relations Board. The report states that the board has found that many labor unions have made political contributions to members of Congress. This is a violation of the National Labor Relations Act. The board has recommended that the National Labor Relations Board should take steps to ensure that labor unions do not make political contributions. This is a very important issue. It is important to ensure that labor unions are operated in the public interest. This includes the prohibition of political contributions. The board's recommendation is a significant step in the right direction. It shows that the board is committed to the public interest and the fair treatment of all workers.

Hands are best when seen at one-half or three-quarters view with fingers curved gracefully like a relaxed dove and long with thick close to palm. Try always handling any object such as telephone, glass, gloves, handbags, etc. with this curve in mind.
