County land being contoured
 Contour farming is being more and more widely practiced in the Nicholas County Soil Conservation District, according to Lovell Ball, chairman of the board of supervisors. At the present time, about 75 percent of the land in cultivation in our county has been contoured to conform type of soil on the farm. Contour lines are being laid out by your Soil Conservation District under the guidance and direction of William J. Threlkoff, District Engineer. The work is being practiced on a large scale by the farmers in the district. The main reason for contouring land is to prevent soil erosion and to conserve land with a slope of 15 percent or more.
