Moral iniquities

Some time ago Cameron Hawley, author of the enormously successful business novel, "Cash McCall," made a talk before the Pennsylvania Bar Association. It was entitled "Our Tax Laws Make Us Dishonest," and was a very urgent speech indeed—as is attested by the fact that The Saturday Evening Post broke a long tradition against using other-than-original material, and reprinted it.

Mr. Hawley observes, as have many others, that there are grave financial inequities in our tax system. But he does not belabor that point. He writes: "What is apparently less obvious, but in my view even more important, is the point that our Federal tax structure is responsible for a progressively more and more serious deterioration of the moral and ethical standards of a substantial segment of our citizenry. To me, the financial inequities of the tax structure are far outweighed by moral iniquities that it encourages."

Mr. Hawley specifically describes how businesses and individuals have found ways to take advantage of the tax laws and to avoid payment of taxes. These stratagems may be legal—but, in Mr. Hawley's view, they are ethically and morally wrong, and lead to "the eroding of our traditional code of commercial morality."

No stronger reason could be advanced for a complete overhaul of that system. For, to quote Mr. Hawley again, "... there is one lesson that history teaches us—when a law loses its respect for the individual, the individual loses his respect for the law."

MAN ON THE STREET

Eisenhower Running Better Today Than He Did In 1952

By Kenneth Fink, Director, Princeton Research Service

Princeton, New Jersey—If a Presidential election were being held today between the 1952 Presidential candidates, President Eisenhower would probably poll a bigger vote against Adlai Stevenson than he did in the November, 1952, elections.

This is the way MAN ON THE STREET sees it at this time:

Eisenhower	62%
Stevenson	38

In the 1952 nationwide Presidential elections Eisenhower received 55.4 per cent; Stevenson, 44.6 per cent of the two party vote.

When today's vote is stacked up alongside the national Presidential vote in the past six elections, the trend looks like this:

NATIONAL PRESIDENTIAL VOTE

	Republican %	Democrat %
1932 Election	40.9%	59.1
1936 Election	37.5%	62.5
1940 Election	45.0%	55.0
1944 Election	46.2%	53.8
1948 Election	*45.3%	49.9
1952 Election	55.4%	44.6

TODAY'S MAN ON THE STREET PREDICTION 62.0 38.0

*2.4 per cent voted for the Progressive Candidate Henry A. Wallace and 2.4 per cent voted for the States' Rights' Candidate J. Strom Thurmond.

And here's the tally on the number of states each party won in each Presidential Election since 1932:

NATIONAL PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

	Number of states won by Republicans	Democrats
1932 Elections	6 states	42 states
1936 Elections	2 states	46 states
1940 Elections	10 states	38 states
1944 Elections	11 states	37 states
1948 Elections	*16 states	28 states
1952 Elections	39 states	9 states

*In the 1948 Elections, four states cast their vote for the States' Rights' Candidate Jay Strom Thurmond.

In 1932, Herbert Hoover, the Republican Presidential candidate, carried six states: Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, and Vermont. The remaining 42 states voted for Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

In 1936, Republican Candidate Alfred M. Landon carried only Maine and Vermont; the other 46 states going down the line for F. D. R.

In 1940, ten states: Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Vermont went to Republican Wendell Willkie; Franklin D. Roosevelt carried the other 38 states.

In the 1944 Presidential Election, Republican Candidate Thomas E. Dewey carried 11 states: Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota, Vermont, and Wisconsin; the remaining 37 states went to Roosevelt.

In the 1948 Elections, Republican Candidate Thomas E. Dewey carried the following 16 states: Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, and Vermont.

In 1948 four states went to the States' Rights' Candidate Thurmond. Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina. The remaining 28 states went to Democrat Harry S. Truman.

In the 1952 Elections, the Democratic Candidate Adlai Stevenson carried nine states: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, and West Virginia; the other 39 states going to President Eisenhower.

The Carlisle Mercury presents MAN ON THE STREET exclusively in this area.

Follow Man on the Street in this newspaper.

Man on the Street is operated and distributed by Princeton Research Service.

The actual question used by MAN ON THE STREET was:

"Suppose the Presidential Elections were being held today. If Eisenhower were the Republican candidate and former Illinois Governor Stevenson were the Democratic candidate, which one would you like to see win?"

MAN ON THE STREET put the above question to a representative cross-section in certain key areas whose past voting behavior has been carefully studied and weighted in relation to the nation's vote.

The medical care dollar

A story about the American Medical Association's recent convention in Chicago, had something interesting to say about the cost of medical care. It will come as a surprise to those who believe that doctor bills are outrageously high, and constitute a major drain on the average family's resources.

This year, America's total medical care bill is expected to reach $11.8 billion. The doctors' share of that will be somewhat over $3 billion. But this sum, will be about a billion less than Americans will pay out for auto mechanics, repairmen and such for maintaining vehicles."

The story explains why doctors' incomes are rising—"a large volume of patients is the chief reason doctors have become more and more willing to raise their fees than have many other sellers of merchandise or services." It states also. "The larger volume of patients stems from increases in the incomes of Americans, spreading use of prepaid medical health plans such as Blue Cross and Blue Shield, a big jump in union sponsored health programs, a growing number of traffic accidents, a rising oldster population and a record pregnancy and birth rate." In short, doctors are working harder and more effectively than ever before.

No one likes to pay doctor or other medical bills. But, seen in the light of logic, it has to be admitted that we get a tremendous return for the medical care dollar. One of the greatest problems facing the medical profession is to preserve the doctor-patient relationship that has been the traditional hallmark of private medicine as contrasted to a state dominated medical system. A blow to one of patient-doctor inevitably endangers the whole human relationship.

Branaman will go to London Rankin injured in motorcycle accident

Thursday, August 6, 1936

At a meeting held at the office of County Agent R. J. Matson last Wednesday afternoon officers were elected for the Nicholas County Fair and plans for holding the fair were discussed.

The first checks under Kentucky's old age Assistance program which were to have been sent out Monday, may be delayed by the announcement from Washington that the Social Security board has withheld its approval of Kentucky's regulations and has requested further information.

Mr. William E. Branaman has been accepted as agent for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company at London, Laurel county, and will leave for that place about the middle of August.

"Choose your partners"

By Dr. Gordon Wilson

"Wed a maiden of the people,"

Warning, spake the old Nokomis."

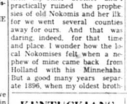
You will recall that Hiawatha while returning from a great adventure in the West, had stopped to buy arrows from the Arrow-maker at what is now Minnehaha Falls, Minnesota. There he saw the maiden whose musical name was transferred to the falls, and there he, as was quite natural, lost his heart to her. When he got back to his home up around Lake Superior, he kept thinking about that Dakota maiden. His old grandmother Nokomis, knew a few things and one of them was that young people sometimes fall in love. Then she spoke the warning words that appear at the top of the essay. Hiawatha had a will of his own, too, and to the Arrow maker's he went and returned home with Minnehaha at his side, who stole the hearts of his people quite as much as she had previously stolen Hiawatha's. That sounds like Fidelity at its best or worst, for we were not too far removed from primitive times, where it seemed unwise to go courting too far away from one's home place.

"Up the river" was some four miles, a pretty good distance in those days; there were certainly fair maidens nearer Sulphur Springs and Fidelity than that. But up the creek went many a young swain, and he, too, returned in due time with his Minnehaha, though I never heard that flowers sprang up spontaneously at their feet as they made their way back to Fidelity and Sulphur Springs. One of my brothers were among the Hiawathas that thus strayed far away to find their mates, and then my other brother and I practically ruined the prophecies of old Nokomis and her ilk, for we went several counties away for ours. And that was during indeed, for that time and place. I wonder how the local Nokomises felt, when a nephew of mine came back from Holland with his Minnehaha. But a good many years separate 1896, when my oldest brother brought back a bride from up the creek, and 1949, when my nephew came back from Holland with his. A Dutch girl whom he had met when he was stationed in the Netherlands during part of World War II.

It just happens that my family illustrates this principle a little better than the average, for I think most youngsters have a greater fear that they will merely follows family or neighborhood tradition and show no originality. When I recall how many new things come into even Fidelity's neighborhood because of those daring young Hiawathas, I wish I could write a poem a sort of minor echo of Longfellow's telling how human eye, even in faraway places, somehow adapts to conditions such as those at Fidelity or Pluto, or wherever you may be.

It does not take much probing into family history to see how limited the choice of a mate used to be in certain families. There were only a few such families that were good enough to affiliate with some of the busty-tasty Sometimes cousins with an assurance of good blood and breeding, married in those early days, most people of my age could tell of having relatives that are double kin to us. It was not merely among arithocratic people like yours, but among many other types, for the rest of us. It has been a long time since I have known any very close cousins to marry. Indeed I suppose I could show With travel and college and wide acquaintance, it does not seem nearly so likely as it did when cousins a few miles apart might get to know each other as some of the few whom they could associate with and naturally fall in love. I wish I could know who the maiden of her people" was that old Nokomis wished Hiawatha to marry. I wonder whether there might still be legends about her. I mean the maiden: maybe she drowned herself in some wild river of the Northern Peninsula of Michigan and is now a star or a constellation, just like similar Greek maidens, and lads, too.

KENTUCKIANS



IN WASHINGTON

By Gil Kingsbury

GONE HOME:

By now, 95 percent of all congressmen have cleared their desks and gone home.

Senator Earle C. Clements, senior senator, has already been in Kentucky, making plans for his campaign for re-election. Senator Robert Humphreys, the interim lawmaker, is preparing for a jaunt to South America on official business. Before he goes, them will be in Chicago next week for the big business of naming a presidential nominee to face Mr. Eisenhower.

PRAISE:

Kentuckians would have been pleased at the closing session of the Senate when Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson, of Texas, heaped praise upon Senator Clements.

Applause greeted his remarks when he referred to the Kentuckian as the "greatest of all whips." He further described him as "a gentle gentleman from a state of great gentlemen" and said that all senators know him as a personal friend.

ADDED PRAISE:

Another Kentuckian who was will rebuild that road.

Robert George, of Carlisle, appointed deputy warden at Frankfort penitentiary under Warden T. Mack Phythian.

Joe Clay, superintendent of waterworks, issues notice to water patrons to discontinue use of city water for sprinkling due to low condition of lake.

W. J. Fields defeats John W. Riley and J. B. Riles for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district, polling 608 votes in Nicholas county, while his two opponents received but 194.

DIED—Mr. Lawrence Bowden, 70, native of Nicholas county, at his home at Madison, Wis. —Walter Hudson Rigg, 28-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Rigg, at their home at Mooresfield.

The Carlisle Mercury
Carlisle, Ky.

Gentlemen:

Would it be possible to get about 5 or 6 copies of the Carlisle Mercury dated July 19th, 1956.

The picture of the car upset on the front sheet is my Father the Rev. Benjamin Woodruff We did get one copy at the hospital but was not able to get more that day it was out, and we haven't been back since so took him to the hospital in Georgetown, Ohio

Thank you very much for your attention in this matter

Sincerely,
Mrs Harold M Ware

THURSDAY, AUGUST 9

Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. (Matthew 16:24.)

One of the most beautiful words in any language is sacrifice. It resonate it with the rich, sweet, and beautiful self-giving experiences of life.

I recall such an experience during the depression days. My mother, a devoted Christian, had a very limited income. It was her wish to subscribe for a splendid religious periodical for my brothers and me. Out of her limited income she expected to pay for those subscriptions. When I discovered it, I chided her and refused to allow her to pay for them. I shall never forget the pained expression on her face. Tears flowed down her cheeks as she said, "But I want to, it gives me great joy."

PRAYER

O God, forgive us wherein we have thought more of ourselves than of Thee and of others. Forgive us for accepting the lesser values. Grant us strength of mind and soul to find meaning in every sacrifice we make as Christians. In Christ's name we pray. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

God will help me to do more than is required.

Federal aid to highway construction explained in detail by Sen. Clements

Inquiries and comments which I am receiving indicate that there is considerable confusion and misunderstanding about the whole broad subject of federal funds to aid in the construction of highways. This apparently is created by the fact that in recent months publicity relating to the subject has put emphasis on the $25 billion-dollar Interstate Highway System, with the result that federal attention to what we commonly call the "regular federal-aid" program has been overlooked or overshadowed.

The 84th Congress made substantial increases in appropriations for this "regular federal-aid" program. From such funds, Kentucky will receive during the next three fiscal years a total of $45,700,000—which is $14,100,000 more than the allotments to our state during the past three fiscal years.

The following table shows the appropriations that have been made to Kentucky over that six year period for the "regular federal-aid" program, with allocations to the three types of projects included in it:

Year	Primary	Secondary	Urban	Total
1954	$4,500,000	$3,700,000	$1,400,000	$ 9,600,000
1955	4,500,000	3,700,000	1,400,000	9,600,000
1956	5,900,000	4,800,000	1,800,000	12,400,000
1957	6,900,000	5,800,000	2,100,000	14,800,000
1958	7,100,000	5,900,000	2,200,000	15,200,000
1959	7,300,000	6,100,000	2,300,000	15,700,000

These funds will be matched by the state on a 50-50 basis. They can be used on highways all over the state and on streets in cities which carry important highway routes.

Some of the misunderstanding over this program probably arises from the fact that the highway development plan advocated by the President and his administration advisers did not include any additional federal funds for projects of this type. The President's plan would have been limited to the Interstate System. That would have ignored the fact that over 90 per cent of the mileage of our nation's highways is made up of the primary and secondary roads. Both a member of the Senate and its Committee on Appropriations, I took a strong position that more money ought to be provided for the "regular federal-aid" highways, and I am pleased that Congress agreed.

In its report on the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956, the Senate Committee said: "By increasing the funds for the primary, secondary and urban systems above the level now authorized, the committee desired to avoid an unbalanced program that would result in deterioration of the primary, secondary and urban systems, so vital to our economy. As great as the need for completing the Interstate System may be, it should not be undertaken at the expense of the secondary and farm-to-market roads. Because of the limited access features of the Interstate System, it may become increasingly necessary to construct additional secondary roads in agricultural areas penetrated by that system. Local roads for these secondary roads are built at a low level, genuine hardship could result to rural people who rely upon public highways to get their products to market. A well-balanced program of expansion of all road systems is believed essential to the national welfare."

The Senate sought to increase the Interstate Highway System from the 40,000 miles originally set in 1944 by 2,500 miles, but the House refused to accept the compromise of 41,000 miles was agreed upon. Whether Kentucky will get any of the additional 1,000 miles will depend upon the case that is made of its needs. Certainly the routes selected for Kentucky in 1947 do not serve the entire state adequately, and will have to be added to if the traffic problems of our state are solved.

There are two major differences between the Interstate System and the "regular federal-aid" program. The Interstate routes are limited to the 41,000 miles set forth in the law, and standards for their construction will be set by the law. But the primary, secondary and urban segments

The federal government will participate in financing the Interstate System on a 90-10 basis. That is: Uncle Sam will put up $9.00 for each $1.00 of state money. On the "regular" program, Uncle Sam puts up $1 for each $1 the state provides.

There will be tremendous benefits to the highway construction throughout Kentucky from the Interstate projects because under the new matching formula it will cost the state less money to get federal funds for these routes than it has been costing, and there will be $91,400,000 in federal funds for these highways during the next three years. This means that the state will find it easier to match the money coming from the federal government for the "regular" program.

In setting policy on both programs, Congress has recognized that the needs of both local and national traffic should be taken into account, and has directed that this thought be kept in mind by the U. S. Bureau of Public roads in the administration of the legislation.

A total of 452,343 cows have been bred artificially in Kentucky since the Kentucky Artificial Breeding Association was started in 1946.

Ellisville Homemakers

By Mrs. Harold McClanahan

The Ellisville Homemakers family night picnic was a huge success. Wednesday night, August 1, at the Blue Lick State Park. There were 56 Homemaker connections present to enjoy a wide variety of wonderful food served on the long tables at the shelter house.

Grace was said by Mrs. J. A. Stanford. And we are indeed thankful for the privilege of gathering together in our country. In this instance on one of the areas where our freedom was battled for one hundred and eighty odd years ago, August 19.

There was no business to attend to, but there was mention that we would have several new members this coming year. We take pride in seeing our roll on the increase.

Mrs. Wilson, our home agent was surely missed as she was attending 4-H camp.

Wasp populations may harm children

The common wasp inflicts a painful sting and children frequently are victims. To protect youngsters, get rid of wasp nests.

Hornets and yellow jackets (members of the family) build large, globular nests of paper-like material in trees, gables and shrubbery. Other wasps make their nests from mud clay and can be inside or outside building, sometimes in stored machinery or equipment.

Hit the nests with a spray or dust at night, when wasps have retired. Hit the openings heavily, so wasps moving in or out will contact the poison. Dusts should have about five percent chlordane or five to 10 per cent DDT. Sprays with two percent chlordane or five percent DDT are effective.
