MAN ON THE STREET

Eisenhower's illness and the election

By Kenneth Fink,
Director, Princeton Research Service

Princeton, New Jersey—This is how MAN ON THE STREET sizes up President Eisenhower and his illness and its effect on rank and file American thinking as of the present moments.

1. To begin with, Eisenhower's illness is deeply intrenched in people's minds. Make no mistake about it. American voters are fully aware of the nature of Ike's illness and its seriousness.

2. If the American people had their choice, they would NOT want Eisenhower to run for another term from the feeling held by many that a second term for Ike will have a damaging effect on his healthwise—and may even result in his early death.

3. Rank and file America expects Ike's health to become an issue in the coming campaign. Ignoring the President's health as an issue on the part of the GOP might very well prove to be the one thing that could beat Ike this November. On the other hand, bringing it down Broad and openly on the health issue by Democratic might very well arouse sympathy for Ike and bring even more voters into his camp.

4. As at the present moment, MAN ON THE STREET does not think the health issue of itself has been much of a factor in getting people to switch from the Ike to the Democratic candidate. In other words, up to this time, Ike's illness has not been an important factor in determining how people are going to vote. When voters are given their choice of which candidate they like most, the big majority still favor Eisenhower—just as many today as before his illness. Whether Ike's health will become a factor in getting people to vote for the Democratic candidate will depend on the way both major political camps handle the issue during the coming weeks.

Ever since President Eisenhower's heart attack a year ago, MAN ON THE STREET has found rank and file opinion as has talked to keenly interested in the status of Ike's health, not one of seriousness of his illness—and fairly well informed of his day to day and week to week progress.

MAN ON THE STREET feels that in general the American people are satisfied with the way the news of Ike's illness has been given to them—that rank and file American citizens are of the opinion that little attempt has been made to hide the facts of Ike's illness.

In other words, up to this time, MAN ON THE STREET believes that American voters have no inclination to think that any one is trying to hide the facts of Ike's illness or is try to minimize its seriousness.

This feeling is undoubtedly a feather in the GOP's cap. It means that the presentation of the facts of Ike's illness has been done well and that Ike's chances to be re-elected are good.

Despite the fact that voters feel that the facts of Ike's illness have been presented to them fully and fairly, American citizens would not want Ike to run again if they could have their say on the matter. Not wanting President Eisenhower to run again MAN ON THE STREET believes does not stem from the feeling that Ike himself is not be capable of carrying on the duties of the nation's highest office, but rather from the feeling of affection that Americans have for President Ike and their desire to protect him from the heavy duties of the President—duties that they feel are too heavy for Ike in his present condition—and duties that may well shorten his days on this earth.

Any attempt to ignore the fact that American believe that Ike should not run again and that the duties of the Presidency may be too much for President Eisenhower and bring about his earlier death could result in enough votes swinging to Ike's Democratic opponent to make victory for the GOP this November very doubtful. Still another important factor that must be kept in mind by leaders in both political camps is the fact that voters fully expect Ike's health to become an issue during the coming campaign.

The seriousness of Ike's illness plus the fact that voters think it only natural for the Democrats to make an issue of Ike's health are the underlying reasons for people's assuming that Ike's health will become a big issue this Fall. Time and again, people have said to MAN ON THE STREET something like this:

"Why, it's only natural that his health should become an issue. A man as sick as he was will naturally make people think of the condition of his health." Many others have volunteered "The Democrats would be crazy not to make an issue of Ike's illness" or "The Democrats will see to it that Ike's health becomes an issue."

In other words, America expects Ike's health to become an issue. And the GOP would be well advised not to evade the issue but to meet it head on and not cry, "Foul."

On the other hand, the Democrats can capitalize on the issue of Ike's health only if they play it skillfully and tread a wary step. Rushing into the fight with banners flying declaring that Ike is unfit by reason of his health to be President and that people should not vote for Ike because he is unfit may win more votes for Ike than for the Democratic candidate.

After all, Ike is still running the country. And as far as the people are concerned, not too badly. Of course, if the Democrats can make a case of showing that the country is not being run too well and that this is due to Ike's illness—and make these facts stick in voters' minds, then the issue of Ike's health could well be the deciding one in this November's election.

Finally, up to this moment, MAN ON THE STREET has seen little evidence that Ike's health has been much of a factor in getting people to switch from President Eisenhower to the Democratic camp. The latest Presidential trial heat" elections still show Ike well ahead.

Whether the issue will become more important as the Campaign progresses, time will tell. And MAN ON THE STREET will be looking for such indications and will report them in this column as soon as they appear.

In short, American voters are fully aware of the nature and seriousness of Ike's illness if they had their choice, they would not want Ike to run, rank and file America expects Ike's health to become an important issue in the coming campaign, but up to this time MAN ON THE STREET has noticed little evidence of wholesale switching from Ike because of his illness. Ike is still a strong favorite.

Battlefield celebration well attended; woman drowns in pond while fishing

Thursday, August 20, 1936

Hundreds attend exercises at Blacks yesterday hearing the Hon. Fred M. Vinson deliver the principal address. The program began at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning and a picnic dinner was spread at the noon hour.

Oiling of the streets of Carlisle has been about completed and Street Superintendent Joe Clay said the work will probably be completed this week.

Carlisle citizens are urged to be more conservative in the use of water as the lake is alarmingly low.

Calvin Darnall has a position in the chemical laboratory of the State Highway Commission at Frankfort and left Monday for that place to assume his new duties.

Approximately 200 applications for old age pensions have been filed in Nicholas County. Miss Jimmie Henry said Wednesday Miss Henry said that full information concerning the eligibility of persons to receive the pensions will be given with in the next week or two.

Engineers have completed the survey for the proposed new dam and lake for the Carlisle water works.

Ernest Ward has taken a position in the Railroad Mail service at Cincinnati.

Mrs. Retta Hamilton sustained a sprained foot when she fell down a flight of stairs.

BORN — To Mr. and Mrs. Charlton McFarland, a son on Saturday, August 15.

Thursday, August 17, 1916

Howe Mitchell appointed inspector for Nicholas County.

Miss Sallie Linville, 50, of Nicholas County, drowned while fishing in a pond on the farm of Dr. William Smith in Bourbon county.

Miss Lucy Berry of Carlisle, takes position as designer and trimmer for millinery establishment in Madison, W. Va.

Maurice Burnaugh, formerly of Carlisle, who has become a prominent actor under the stage name of Peter Page, leaves for London to appear in Raymond Hitchcock's play.

Miss Lida Gardner, county superintendent, announces that Nicholas County had largest per capital school enrollment in state for past three years, more than 71 per cent of the pupils of school age being enrolled in school.

BORN—To Mr and Mrs Harry T. Letton of the county, on the 14th, a son—To Mr and Mrs. John C. King, of near Mt Sterling, on the 15th, a daughter.

WED—Mrs Albert Feebeck and her home in Carlisle on the 10th—Hanson Westfall, 31, at the home of his parents, Mr and Mrs. Elias Westfall, near Miller Station, on the 16th.

SECOND ROUND:

The second round of the preliminary heats in the presidential sweepstakes is nearing an end here in San Francisco and, of course, there's no doubt as to the outcome—Mr. Eisenhower renominated.

Let's look back for the moment to the events of last week. some 2300 miles away in Chicago Happy Chandler, in spite of the blow to his ambitions, presided like a gentleman and a politician in an otherwise dull convention.

KENTUCKIANS ARRIVE:

When the Blue Grass delegation arrived a parade was formed and some three hundred guests of Chandler supporters marched to the Conrad Hilton the headquarters hotel.

A snappy high school band led the way and another Chicago band brought up the tail and in the line of march it was a mile from the head of the column to the tail. Thousands of citizens and visitors who lined the streets.

THE BARKLEY TRIBUTE

Then came the demonstration for Barkley—a demonstration that is often a time consuming affair as Senator Clements found the resolution which included a beautiful prayer song brought the brief period of mourning to a close.

FRIEND AND FOE

We wouldn't say the convention was a love feast for Kefauver—Democratic but on the surface at least there was plenty of sweetness and light. Mrs. Roberta Hosh Earle, Clements big gun and Charlie Blackburn were said to be caught by a national photographer and the picture went out all over the country over the photo-wires.

A highlight was a dinner given early in the week for just about all Kentuckians. It was held at the swank Palmer House's Red Lacquer Room and the food and company and the music was the best. Former Governor Wetherby, former Governor Keen Johnson, former Lt.-Gov. Emerson Beauchamp gathered with the leaders of the present state administration, in an evening of peace and harmony. Naturally, the forthcoming senatorial campaign was discussed and optimism was the keynote.

Three rivets in the handles of kitchenware are considered the minimum for holding them together.

TID BITS

You-all gains favor in linguistic usage; ye, thou and you-un fall by wayside

Every time I teach my course in the English Language, I have considerable trouble getting across the former significance of the the word thou and its plural ye. With the help of the King James Version of the Bible, I am sometimes able to restore for a while the old, antiquated usage in which these two words were used as they had been for centuries as our language and its parent language, that is, thou meant one person addressed and ye meant more than one, and that was that. But, along in the 1300's our ancestors decided that they must be like the Frenchmen and use one set of terms for inferiors and equals and another for superiors hence there arose the custom of calling a person worthy above one by ye, even though it had been plural. the ordinary person was still called thou. More than one of inferior or similar position would be addressed as ye, as formerly. Later still called by the familiar term and you-uns and you-ens are low but ye is rather good and you is intended as low but ye is intended to mean more than one. There is also, while George or Sam are now are, with snooty makes it appear that we are people feeling superior to these useful and even necessary words. You-uns has fallen in its place of being a good plural among good people, you-ens has never had any great social standing to lose. You-all is also used in favor and has no disadvantage of being socially acceptable as well as convenient. Just what will finally happen is more than I know as I am a recorder of linguistic usage, not a prophet.

Some funny things have happened along the way. The Quakers, founded by George Fox, resented the different styles of addressing people merely because some had rank and some did not. These humble hypocrites stuck to thou and thee, especially thee, and even came to say thee is, like he is or thee has. These Quakers felt that it was low fawning to call a man you or showed that man was trying to curry favor. The basic democracy that God had established. They did not know how much that was mixed up with a whole religious philosophy.

A parallel course came in France, where the polite Frenchman objected to being addressed by the polite term, leaving him the privilege of using the other term. This very polite Frenchman, the Quaker was afraid of being looked upon as a Frenchman did not want to be put into a position of being thought of as a familiar protonot. Just how do we do it now, though we use the terms glibly, there is a feeling that we are somehow better brothers or members of the same social clique? Before the days of laugh too much at funny quakers or Frenchmen, we might analyze ourselves for the lack of them to see whether we are strangers or pals.

—ATTLE YAPPIN.

A good Michigan recipe.

Exchanging news and views with Mrs Lillian Ferguson while we waited at the Paris bus station last Friday morning we gave me the following recipe. Up in Michigan, where she spent her girlhood days, the young at heart, "Go with the younger generation," we don't try to keep up with them.

Every day and Sunday too.

Vary vegetable seasoning to please the family. Cook until half forgets it is being served often. Season especially those you like a my seasoning improve. Ky Wonder pole beans cooked half the morning with a generous hunk of country bacon, served with cornbread and milk, have plenty of cold left-over's. Cabbage cooked until the leaves are tender. The Tuesday noon, a buddy clinging to his short sleeves—a real change in the attitude—a beautiful Pray ing Mantis, fully four inches in length. Large Mantis are supposed with confidence from one entomologist saying that he could never tire slowly to see the show. Calm by the arms folded, drawing the prayer outside to fetch on to the next pastorby.

It was then my mind filled with thoughts of Little One who refers to a whole colony of these bugs encamped in our yard a few weeks ago as the Praying Mantes.

Five fruitful, happy years.

A capacity crowd attended services at the Carlisle Methodist church Sunday night to hear the Rev G. W. Townsend, pastor, review the past five years, and deliver his last sermon of the five-year pastorate. With other Methodist pastors of the county, Rev. Townsend left Monday morning to attend the annual meet of the Conference at Wilmore this week. The local membership dares to hope that he will be returned for the coming year. Under his untiring leadership and devotion the church has made long strides forward. Entire families have been added, a new educational building was completed this year and in every way the years have been most fruitful.

Additions to the church Sunday night were Mr and Mrs. Luther Tincher and Mr Mason Swartz.

The sum of $34,235.00 was paid into the church the past year.

The Lord has blessed the work.

The Light still shines in the darkness, and the darkness has never put it out. (John 1:5 Phillips)

Our lord opportunity to visit is a rare was during a vacation trip. As we stood looking at the rock formations set with water out guide explained that the formation of the rocks by dripping water was started centuries ago. He also said that the green color growing on the wall did not appear until the electric lights were installed.

Our guide pulled the electric switch and the cave was in total darkness—the blackest we had ever experienced. Then our guide lighted a candle. We could see again. All the darkness in the cave could not put out the light of that candle.

A radiant and unfaltering faith in God had its beginning in Christian experiences throughout the ages. witness that new life springs forth in the darkest places when exposed to the light of God's Word. The assurances of the Christian faith are that God has established His Word as a light in the world, and that no darkness is black enough to put it out.

PRAYER

O Christ, Thou art the true light of this world. So shine into our hearts that all the darkness will be expelled and we shall walk in Thy light without fear and without stumbling. In the blessed name of Christ we pray. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Christ is the Light of the world no darkness can overcome Him.
