A story about spending your money away from home

(Rowan County News)

Once upon a time there was a business man who spent all of his money away from home. He was sure that he could take care of himself and that his town didn't need anything from him.

After a few years, his business wasn't keen as he had hoped it would be, his friends didn't seem to think he was quite as important as he thought he was, and trade seemed to flow by his doors.

The man began to watch his competitor, who was an intelligent advertiser, a consistent contributor to the public purse, a man anxious to give his time and thought to community projects and a believer in the fact that it pays to keep as much money as possible at home.

After noting all these factors, the man continued to wonder why some of his old customers went to the hewcomer, and why almost everybody had the idea that he was a tightwad and that his competitor was a public-spirited leader of community life.

MAN ON THE STREET

Adlai Stevenson—How Strong A Candidate In 1956?

By Kenneh Fink, Director, Princeton Research Service

Princeton, New Jersey—How strong a candidate is Adlai Stevenson going to be this year? Is he likely to run better than he did in 1952 or worse?

This is the way MAN ON THE STREET sizes up Adlai Stevenson—the 1956 Democratic Presidential nominee.

1. To begin with, Adlai Stevenson is better known today than he was in 1952. Other things being equal, voters generally favor the candidate they know more about. In assaying Adlai Stevenson the 1956 standard bearer, one thing is certainly evident—that the 1956 Stevenson is far better known than he was four years ago. On this score the Democrats were wise in choosing a candidate well known to the American voter.

2. The fact that 27,314,992 people cast ballots for Stevenson in 1952 is also something to be counted in Stevenson's favor. Only two Presidential candidates in the nation's history: Franklin D. Roosevelt and Dwight D. Eisenhower have received a greater popular vote.

In 1936, Roosevelt received 27,476,673 votes; and in 1952, Eisenhower received 33,936,252 votes—the greatest number of votes any American Presidential candidate has ever received.

Despite the enormous vote that Stevenson received in 1952, MAN ON THE STREET has every reason to believe that if an election were held today, the number of 1952 Stevenson voters who would switch to Eisenhower would be greater than the number of 1952 Eisenhower voters who would turn to Stevenson.

In this connection, it is worth noting that President Franklin Delano Roosevelt made his strongest showing when he ran for a second term in 1936. In that year, Roosevelt polled 62.5 per cent of the popular vote and as has already been mentioned, picked up 27,476,673 votes—a number exceeded only by Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952.

If the elections were held today, MAN ON THE STREET believes that Eisenhower would run better than he did in 1952—just as F. D. R. did better in 1936 than he did in 1932.

It goes without saying that anything can happen between now and Election Day and MAN ON THE STREET will keep readers informed of any changes in sentiment as he finds them.

3. Adlai Stevenson is the favorite of Democratic Party members and is undoubtedly the Democratic Party's most popular candidate.

This is shown by Polls made during the period between November, 1952, and today. Despite the fact that Stevenson is the most popular candidate among rank and file Democrats, he has never attained the popularity among Democrats that Eisenhower has among Republicans.

Polls made since 1952 have never shown Stevenson with much over a bare majority of the Democratic Party members naming him their favorite candidate for President when given a choice of candidates, whereas more than four out of every five Republicans have usually named Eisenhower as the man they would like to see their party nominate for President.

4. Perhaps the most important thing to be noted about the 1956 Democratic Presidential candidate is that MAN ON THE STREET believes that Stevenson up to this time has not been successful in winning over to him a large body of loyal, devoted followers among rank and file voters the way Eisenhower has.

5. Finally, Stevenson's speeches and style of delivery in the opinion of MAN ON THE STREET still do not have the appeal to the American people that they should have if he is to win in November.

MAN ON THE STREET does not find that Stevenson is talking above the heads of American voters, but rather that he lacks the simple, direct style that Harry S. Truman had in his speech at the Democratic Convention's final meeting if Stevenson can learn to bring his arguments to the people in simple, short, direct statements that can easily be remembered, he is likely to do better than he did in 1952.

Summing up the 1956 candidate, on the minus side MAN ON THE STREET would put the fact that Stevenson as yet has not excited the American voters. And up to this time, Stevenson's speeches lack the simple, direct style necessary to bring back to the Democratic fold the Democratic Party members and Independents who in 1952 voted Dwight D. Eisenhower into the White House.

On the plus side for Stevenson is the fact that he is better known today than he was in 1952; that more than 27 million voters cast their ballots for him that year, and that Stevenson is unquestionably the most popular candidate among rank and file Democratic Party members.

A LITTLE YAPPIN

By Nellie Crump
Feelin' Mighty Low!

At the annual Methodist Conference at Wilmore last week Rev. George W. Townsend was assigned to the Versailles church. For the past five years he has been pastor of the Carlisle church and most everyone feels a great loss in having this able minister and his good wife Mary leave our midst. An end comes to everything, but not without sincere regret. However, we welcome Rev. Gwinn H. Bierley, the new pastor (and Alice) coming here from Versailles where he has been for one day. Actual moving will take place Thursday (today). The van bringing the Bierleys will take the Townsends back. Such is the life of these God-called men who needs must travel the paths and byways to save the lost. Tut, tut, words are futile, but let it be known the Carlisle membership stands by the new pastor 99.44 percent.

Bee, bee, bumble-bee.

While waiting for a bus at Paris recently a lady rushed by with all haste and went up the library steps. Just as hurriedly she came down, smiled and said the library was closed. She then asked anxiously, "Do you know any way to get rid of bumble bees" Knowing full well I resembled no queen bee there in the heat and din of a busy street, I was more or less stunned as I replied, "Where are they" and hastily grabbed bag and baggage to leave for a destination unknown. Then she told me of her home being literally alive with the not-footed things. In the walls where they could not be gotten to. Every suggestion had been tried with little or no result. Thousands, she said had been gashed out with a hone until her family was afraid to walk in the yard. DDT seemed to worsen the situation. "We thought maybe some book in the library might help," she concluded desperately as she hopped into a car that was slowing down and went around the corner just as the Carlisle bus came around another.

Are you through?

Heard on every corner, "Are you through cutting tobacco?" Those chilly nights last week made all growers get up a little earlier and work a little later, no doubt, to protect one of the best tobacco years in Nicholas County history. At least that is what one farmer says he did—"not slow time, not fast time, but all the time," he concluded with a friendly grin as he hurried on. Another farmer in a dog trot right behind him hailed me with, "Summer is gone, but where did it go"—as if I should know. I was busy buttoning up last winter's sweater! Just a sample of Kentucky's variegated weather—today is hot, as firecracker lit at both ends.

Yaps—all . . .

TODAY'S meditation

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 30

Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. (I Corinthians 10:12.)

Long, long ago, a friend asked an old man why he complained so much

"Oh", said he, "I have every day so much to do. I have two falcons to tame, two hares to keep from running away, two hawks to manage, a serpent to control, a lion to chain and a sick man to tend and wait upon."

Then said the friend, "But no man has all these things to do at once."

"Ah," corrected the old man, "But all of me do I have said. The two falcons are my two eyes, the two hares are my feet, the two hawks are my hands, the serpent is my tongue, the lion is my heart, and the sick man is my own body."

How true this complaining attitude is of too many of us today! Life is meant to be a loom where we weave the texture of our characters, a forge where we temper our wills, and a mart where ourselves are best able to sell what we have made of ourselves.

PRAYER

O Father, we have no greater guide than Thee. Thou art the Creator of all life, of all law, of all love. Guide and bless us this day as we go forth to live. Help us to do as to the honor and glory of Thy name, through Christ. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Feed Roses Now

Roses that are not being fed each month should be fed not later than the last of August, says W. R. Elliott, Extension horticulturist at the University of Kentucky. This will encourage beautiful late-fall bloom.

A good-sized handful of high-grade, complete fertilizer should be applied to the soil around each plant, working it into the soil about 2 to 3 inches deep before watering. If the roses are mulched, the mulch should be pulled back before the feeding is done, then replaced later.
