Medical Education Week

Preparations are now in full swing for Medical Education Week, to be observed April 22-28. The four sponsoring national organizations—the American Medical Association, the Association of American Medical Colleges, the National Physicians' Education Foundation and the American Medical Association—are all working together in their power to make sure that during the special observance, the American people will learn and appreciate the strain and accomplishments that have been made by the nation's general medical schools.

It is pointed out that in the other groups, organizations and institutions that cooperate to make the week the response is almost the same. In many instances, although the state of Kentucky has not yet received its share of the attention, it is expected that the state will be able to take over the direction and control of the schools. But the fact that there are still so many untrained persons, has made it necessary to have a special week to bring attention to the fact that there are no provisions for the state to take over the schools. The fact that there are no provisions for the state to take over the schools is a matter of fact. It is a matter of fact that there are no provisions for the state to take over the schools.
