GOP candidates not on defensive

(Lincoln Herald)
The two Kentucky Republican candidates for the United States Senate in the November election find themselves in a far more difficult position today than they occupied a few years ago when they sought public office. Things have changed, and the candidates now find themselves on the defensive and in the unenviable position of trying to explain some of the unpleasant activities of the Eisenhower administration. They both are having a hard time of it, and it reports from the field seem authentic.

He's A Good Man

By Kenneth Hill, Director, Princeton Research Service

Princeton, New Jersey—What reasons do those who say they would vote for the Eisenhower ticket today give for doing so? This is the way MAN ON THE STREET says he would vote for Eisenhower.

1. He did a good job of getting the economy back on its feet. He has done that by his handling everything well and his record of accomplishment is well known.

2. He did a good job for the people. He made a good job of the people's money.

3. He's a good man. He's a good man that's why I vote for him.

4. He's a good man that's why I vote for him.

5. He's a good man that's why I vote for him.

Thruout Motion, when he last ran for Congress, was elected as one of the "big" sales as the Republican party was concerned. It was easy then to vote for the Republican party and to get the defeat of all candidates under the same banner. It is difficult today to vote for the Republican party while the opposition is so strong.

Let's keep the team in the game

(Hancock Clarion, Hewanville, Ky.)
We do not hesitate to say that during the past few years, and especially during the last Congress when the Democratic party was in control, and Senator Clement J. Harbo, Jr. directed the Senate procedure, he has accomplished more for the State of Kentucky than any Senator during the same length of time in the history of the Commonwealth. He has been active and active in every thing that would bring better conditions to Kentucky. He has stood steadfastly for the interests of the farmers and the small business man of the State. No one has done more for Kentucky than he. He has represented the best interests of the State more than any other Senator. He has done more for the State of Kentucky than any other Senator. He has done more for the State of Kentucky than any other Senator. He has done more for the State of Kentucky than any other Senator.

The "Voice" reflects...

This is the way MAN ON THE STREET says he would vote for Eisenhower.

3. A motivating factor for many people who say they would vote for the GOP today's program. Variations of the same idea mentioned frequently are: the economy is working. We had pretty good years under the Eisenhower administration.
