Great strides have been made in fighting tuberculosis but a great deal more remains to be done and must be done. The latest statistics indicate that 250,000 Americans have active TB, 150,000 of them unknown to health authorities. In addition, there are 5,000,000 people with inactive TB, and 550,000 of them are still in need of medical supervision or public health follow-up. An estimated 75,000,000 Americans—a third of the population—have tuberculosis with germ counts that will eventually develop into active tuberculosis. Early diagnosis and immediate treatment is essential for the successful control of early stages of disease from infection contact.
