MAN ON THE STREET

A Plan To Ensure Honest Elections

By Kenneth Fink, Director, Princeton Research Service

Princeton, New Jersey—Our Democratic way of life rests on the foundation of free, honest elections and the right of citizens to choose between candidates for elective offices.

Just as long as voters a cross the U. S. A. have the right to elect the men of their choice and the power to put new men into office when they are dissatisfied with the way their elected officials are carrying on their work, will this nation reap the rich benefits of a Democratic society.

It goes without saying that the "Dishonest Election" is the greatest single domestic threat to the American way of life.

The Reader's Digest of September, 1956, highlighted the matter of dishonest elections in its article entitled "How Crooks Steal Your Vote."

The article showed that dishonest election practices do exist and warned that "Ballot thievery is more prevalent than ever today."

Because of the importance of the problem of dishonest elections to the nation, man on the street's column this week offers a plan to help ensure honest elections. This is the plan:

1. Every community a month or so before an election should publish in its local newspapers the name and address of each person registered (eligible) to vote.

With the list of registered (eligible) voters on view in the newspapers for every one to see and read, people who are not bona fide residents of a community, or who, for one reason or another, are not eligible to vote, would hesitate before registering.

With such a list published, it would also not be too difficult for impartial officials to detect those who are not entitled to be registered: for example, those who have given incorrect addresses; those who have moved out of the community; those who have not lived long enough in the community to be eligible to vote; those who maintain legal residences in other communities, and those who no longer are alive.

This one step—the publishing of the names and addresses of registered voters in local newspapers—should go a long way towards discouraging illegal voting.

The second final step in MAN ON THE STREET'S proposal would be to publish in local newspapers a few days after an election the names and addresses of all those who voted and whose ballots were counted in the election.

A comparison of the two lists: the names and addresses of people registered (eligible to vote) and the names and addresses of all those who did vote on Election Day would determine some irregularities (if they exist) fairly easily. It would not be too difficult, for instance, to ascertain whether the number of people who had voted in the election was greater than the number of people who were registered (eligible to vote), or whether people not registered had voted. And spot checks by impartial officials would quickly show whether those who were supposed to have voted actually did so, in other words, by asking the voters. In short, MAN ON THE STREET is of the opinion that any community can take some big steps toward doing away with dishonesty in elections and guaranteeing its citizens the right to choose between candidates and the power to turn out of political office the men they disapprove of, if it does these two things:

1. Publish in local newspapers a month or so before an election the names and addresses of every registered (eligible) voter, and
2. Publish in local newspapers the list of names and addresses of all who voted in the election, according to the election book records.

One further matter worth mentioning is the impetus the publishing of the two lists would do to voter participation.

From his knowledge of rank and file America, MAN ON THE STREET is sure that many, many more people would register and vote if they knew that if they didn't register and vote, their friends and neighbors would know about it.

The Carlisle Mercury presents the reports of MAN ON THE STREET exclusively in this area.

The MAN ON THE STREET weekly feature is able to render a unique public service to the state and nation because this newspaper pays for and publishes its findings.

Citizens care for flood refugees; skating rink building collapses

Thursday, January 28, 1937

Carlisle mobilizes to receive and care for 100 flood refugees; 38 members of Howitzer Co. are quartered at Maysville, according to a message from Capt. Grimes Caywood, who is stationed with the men; Robert Henry and 12 men are stationed at Brooksville; after a week in which the muddy waters of the Ohio have crept steadily to new heights, thousands have been driven from their homes; Licking river reached a flood stage Sunday night feet higher than has been recorded for more than 100 years.

The office "devil" says: The Mercury's news editor is patroling the water front in Mason county this week, advertisers have called it a day; our usually prolific rural correspondence has dwindled to a mere trickle; no one is visiting, so we are unable to chronicle the highly interesting news; few city papers are straggling in, so swiping state and general news is out, and it's all flood news anyhow. So we proffer you this very interesting piece of news: Carlisle would have been digging out of the mud too, had not our Brushy Fork been deepened and cleaned out. And don't forget how some folk knocked that undertaking.

Ratliff Bros. Co. was unable to estimate the damage done at their still at Myers, until the water recedes.

Mr. Henry M. Potts closed 44 years of continuous active service in the Carlisle Deposit Bank on Jan 14.

The will of T. S. Gorham was filed here for probate Monday. All of his estate was left to his wife, Mrs. Lizzie Gorham, who qualified as executrix, without bond.

Mrs. Eda S. Taylor, county superintendent of schools, stated to The Mercury Tuesday that the Myers Station school would be reopened Wednesday probably.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Purcell, of the county, a son on Jan. 27.—To Mr. and Mrs. Rufus L. Yates, of Lexington, a daughter, on Jan. 24.

MARRIED—Miss Vada Adams and Elgan Markham, both of Ewing on Jan. 20.—Miss Lena McKee and Elgin Mitchelltree, both of Myers, Monday.—Miss Elizabeth Sue Thomas and Russell Prather at Lexington last Wednesday afternoon.

DIED—Rev. Harry Hudson, former pastor of the Presbyterian church in Moorefield and Sharpsburg Jan. 23.—Mrs. Frankie Mann Johnsoa, Jan. 8 at Meridian, Miss.—Mrs. Henrietta Wasson Campbell Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry L. James in Berea.—Jeptha P. Mann, 79, at the Blue Lick Springs hotel Saturday morning.

Will Tune suffers painful injuries when scaffolding on which he was working at home of A. E. Trumbo in Dorseyville breaks.

S. W. Keller of Lexington, formerly of Carlisle, resigns position in Lexington Internal Revenue office to take position as storekeeper-gauger.

Old skating ring building on Elm street, owned by Frank C. Taylor, collapses under weight of heavy snow on roof and damages several automobiles stored in the building.

BORN — To Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Gaunce, of the county, on the 18th, a daughter.—To Dr. and Mrs. S. P. Mahney, of Carlisle, on the 20th, a son.—To Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Armstrong, of Farmville, Va. formerly of Carlisle, on the 18th, a son.

MARRIED—Miss Lorena Vice and Jasper Craycraft, both of the county.

DIED—John Thomas Parker, 72, at the home of his sister, Mrs. H. S. Letton, in the county, on the 19th.—Mrs. Lucretia Flora, 81, at her home near Upper Licks, on the 22rd.—David Howard, 70, at the home of his son, Leonard Howard, in Millersburg.

Is your child protected?

Just read about 3,000 bottles of Salk polio vaccine being ground into bits by one of the largest producers because it had grown too old for use and had been returned by druggists and doctors. This amount could have protected 9,000 children against polio, the spokesman said. Is your child one of that number?

Long time, no see!

A communication today from our loyal friend, Mr. J. R. Blake, Jackson, Ky., reminds us that he has been a Mercury subscriber for 70 years. Leaving Nicholas County 65 years ago, he has now observed his 90th birthday and has enjoyed keeping up with the happenings "back home" all through the years. He

Read John 15: 18-27

I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth. (John 14:16, 17.)

During a campaign of visitation evangelism in which teams of laymen were sent out to invite people to come to Christ, two young men who had never done this work were hesitant to begin the task.

After a prayer in which they committed themselves to follow the leading of the Holy Spirit, they set forth with the names of some prospects.

Before reaching their prospect, a downpour of rain forced them to take sheller in a home, a family of strangers not on their list. Upon being invited into the house, they found the father reading his Bible in an effort to find the way of salvation.

The young, inexperienced visitors told of their personal experience, and in less than one hour this family—father, mother, and son—had made personal commitments to Christ and church membership. The Holy Spirit had been present.

PRAYER

Heavenly Father, this day we would bring all of our problems to Thee. Help us to have complete trust in the leadings of the Holy Spirit, Use us in Thy service, to Thy name's honor and glory; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Christ is our inspiration and strength in all things, at all times.—A. W. Oliver (Oklahoma)

Whole Hog or None.

When office business slows down to a creep there is always the subscription list to check over—and this can be fun—sort of a one person game. Not know ing one playing card from another, I would call this shuffling of subscription cards "solitaire" anyway. Naturally the name Smith appears on the list more often than any. 12 of them Joneses are a little short, only two; then come Gaunce and Vice with ten each; Hamilton, Caine, Anderson and Clark with eight, followed by Ritchie (spelled four different ways, but Ritchey just the same) and Scott with seven each; Campbell, Clay and Henry, six. Stone, five; Bell, Taylor and Wilson, four each. Besides having fun playing this game, one always has the appearance of being real busy. if able to keep awake. Watch out!

Boone story little known

Daniel Boone is a name recognized by all Kentuckians but it is a safe guess that few could recount much of the history of this man so important to the Commonwealth.

Boone, minus a coonskin cap —historians agree he shunned it for a black felt type; personifies the frontiersman the fearless hunter and explorer who created the mold into which Davy Crockett, Kit Carson, Paul Bryan and many other real and imaginary heroes were poured

The Boone saga as studied by every school child is basically true in its broad outline and, even without embellishment, it has a storybook ring.

Boone was one of 11 children born to Squire and Sarah Morgan Boone, English Quakers who lived in Pennsylvania. Daniel attended only briefly a school taught by his uncle where he acquired the bare fundamentals of an education.

From boyhood Boone acquired the ability to "think Indian," an asset he put to good use later. In 1750, the Boones moved to Virginia and then to North Carolina and in a short time Daniel was exploring the forests which spread out across the mountains to the West.

As early as 1753, Boone had explored along the line between Kentucky and Virginia and there are indications that in 1767, he entered Kentucky down the headwaters of the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River.

After being turned back in his first effort to move his and five other families to Kentucky, Boone met with the Cherokee Indians, in 1773 and bought land on the Kentucky River. He then undertook to carve a road from the settlements in the Yadkin River Valley, in North Carolina, through the Cumberland Gap to the Kentucky River, where he and his party erected Fort Boonesboro

As life became more settled along the frontier, Boone was elected to represent Kentucky's Fayette County in the Virginia Legislature, in 1781. After his term expired, Boone moved to Missouri, where he died in 1815 at the age of 86.

The explorer and his wife are buried in a single grave in Frankfort cemetery, on the banks of his beloved Kentucky members have been added to the church.

He has been a leading figure in church, civic and club activities, serving in many capacities. He has dedicated many churches other than Christian Churches and helped to raise debts on buildings.

In the local church he organized The Broadcasters Class which he taught, and at present has over one hundred members.

The work in the county has been greatly stimulated by his efforts, personally conducting campaigns in the churches at East Union, Mt. Zion, Pleasant Valley, Blue Licks, Ellisville, Stoney Creek, Jackstown, Myers and Concord, and opened four closed county churches, has started seven ministers, and added some 1,500 additions. He also establishd ed annual one week's meeting at the historic Concord church.

Organizer of the Woman's Council, set up Family Night, annual Baby Day, remodeled building, increased pastor's current expense from $7,000 to $11,000, served on local hospital board president of local Rotary, and many other worthwhile activities.

Mr. Whitehouse owns one of the most valuable libraries in the state containing some 5000 books, mostly on the organization and religious opinions of the New Testament Church, the Christian Church, which he so faithfully represented. In disposing of his books, he reserved his choice selections, which he shipped to his new home. Gave some 1040 volumes to Kentucky Christian College, at Grayson, and sold a small amount to local and neighboring people.

Mr. Whitehouse was born in Shelby County, Ky., and was educated in Lancaster high school, the University and the Presbyterian Seminary. In 1911 he was married to Miss Susie M. Gentry of California, who has been his faithful, helpful wife these many years, and a source of help to him in his ministry, bright, cultured, refined and head of many of the activities of the young people of the church.

They have three children; Col. Harvey J. Whitehouse, who is now serving in Germany; (with his family) Dr. Scott Whitehouse, a noted surgeon in Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Wesley Wilson of New Castle, Colo., and nine grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitehouse plan to leave Carlisle the middle part of February, and after visiting relatives in Kentucky for a few weeks, will make their home at 4355 Woodleigh Lane, Pasadena, Calif.

He plans to rest and later will probably serve as supply pastor and deliver lectures in Christian colleges, on the Faith and Belief of the great Christian church.

Last week his Bible class gave him a dinner and party at the church, and presented him with a radio for his car.

Last Wednesday night at the Family Night supper, the young people of the church presented a program in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Whitehouse. George Rankin Carter, chairman of the official board, gave highlights of the ministry of the Whitehouses during their stay in Carlisle, and presented gifts of luggage and travelers check which they received most graciously.

In the devotional, three candles were lighted calling attention to the past, present and future work, of the pastor, which was followed by a playlet "Down Memory's Lane," where the work was highlighted by scenes from infancy, through school, marriage and parenthood.

New Minister Arrives

Rev. Kineman, the new pastor who has served as minister at the Tipton Normanda Christian church for the past five years, was minister at the Mt. Vernon, Kentucky, Christian church for some time. He holds a degree from Johnson Bible College, Tenn., and also Butler University Indianapolis Ind. He is scheduled to arrive here about Feb. 14 and deliver his first sermon as pastor on February 17.

Mr. Whitehouse has served as supply pastor since January first and will deliver his last sermon here on February 10.
