Paint thinner pollutes creeks as transport tanker overturns

A large transport truck, loaded with paint thinner, wrecked on U. S. 69 five miles north of Millersburg Tuesday morning, spilling its contents into a branch of Trouty Creek.

Millersburg officials were advised of the mishap and farmers all along the stream, fearing their stock to other pastures, immediately began moving their livestock away from the water.

Observers said the liquid recovered from the tanker was identified as methyl isobutyl alcohol, a poisonous and dangerous to the skin.

State Trooper Oswald Williams identified the driver of the truck as Stanley Russell Brown, 35, of Springside, Ky.

The truck was owned by the County of Taylor, Ohio, and was licensed to the State Police.
