Big and little things

If your fire insurance has been in effect for a number of years without review or re-insurance, you may find that you are under-insured. Since 1943, statistics show the cost of home building has just about doubled. So, if your home fire insurance policy dates back to that period, you can readily see what could happen to your pocketbook if fire should strike.

A similar situation in the case of "little things," like bedding, curtains, clothing and other household items has taken place and it's these "little things" which add up to a surprising total when an accurate inventory is made. A good remedy for a few household items is to insure them with a special fire insurance policy which covers up to $10,000.

called—only by students of his field. But every school boy recognizes that Henry Clay was the man who said, "I'd rather be right than be popular."

Some students of history know that Henry Clay did not die until that he said, "I'd rather be right than be popular."

WORTHY PARTICIPATING IN BUSINESS

It is that people living in big towns can never mistake it for 100,000 of more people—consequently, the real estate market is that of their smaller towns.

But nearly two out of every five in each city size believe that the real estate market is that of their smaller towns.
