Precautions urged for burley setting

When tobacco setting time arrives—about the end of May—farmers should follow several simple, proved practices, says Boswell Hunt, Agricultural Extension Service tobacco specialist.

Hunt said this year's tobacco beds are in excellent shape with a good prospect for plenty of plants. The beds are almost entirely free of the usual diseases that plague farmers.

SETTING SUGGESTIONS

1 Insure a good stand in the field by spraying or dusting plants before pullings in the beds with the recommended concentrations of DDT to control flea-beetles. this will give protection from 5 to 10 days in the field depending on the weather to the newly transplanted plants.

2 Use good sized plants—the stems should be about the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil to insure a good stand the first time.

3 Don't transplant when temperature is in the 90's. if setting must be done, do it in the late afternoon or evening.

4 Cultivate the newly planted field immediately in shallow fashion to control weeds and grasses and break the soil crust caused by setting equipment.

Bury Me Near The Old Home"

Bury me near the Old Home,
There let me peacefully rest
Close by the side of my loved ones
There let me peacefully rest.
Bury me near the old home.
Near where my forefathers sleep,
There let me rest through the ages
Calmly and peacefully rest.
Bury me near the old home.
Life with its toils all are past
Heaven's bright throngs are waiting
Night is all turned to day.
Peacefully rest, peacefully rest.
Close by the side of my loved ones
Peacefully there let me rest.
