Wholesale confusion

American here long professed to be amused but somewhat agitated at the amount of bargaining that takes place in the wholesale marketplaces of the world. Many a farmer has come home to find that his wheat is worth 10 cents more than he thought it was, but no longer.

American here have become almost overgrown with the idea of discount houses, from department stores that "want to be understood" to automobile dealers that delight in deking and skimming at their product. And it is these discounters who tell their buyers by looking at an unreluctantly high "asking" price on them and bargaining with potential buyers that the best exchange had asked back.

American here still a little incredulous about this impressive way of doing business—perhaps because what they are buying are

Today's meditation

Thursday, November 14
Read John 14:27-31

Peace I leave with you, peace I give unto you. John 14:27

Prayer

O God of Peace, help us to love that we act as examples to the world and only in this world to be divided and troubled. May we never have that peace which is the peace of this world, but be all our trials, remember His unfailing assurance, "I will not leave you comfortless." In His name we pray.

THURSDAY FOR THE DEAD

Man is kept in perfect peace when his mind is stilled on God.
