From-An editor's random thoughts

Full-tilt is to me the liveliest of seasons, though there is lacking the fresh breeze of April, the passionate, reawakening fullness of young June. It is as if Nature were teaching us these days of routine existence, how to grow old gracefully, how to face change peacefully and with a hope that sees beyond the greyness the burgeoning of another Spring. . . .

So many of us are so busy, so much preoccupied on the patch edge . . . they heaved forth for the midday, golden yellow masses for breakfast, these are of the delightful commensals of the days of the year. . . .
