Brucellosis program outlined; mass meeting to be held soon

Dr. Robert Singer, state veterinarian from Frankfort, explained the Kentucky Brucellosis Control Program to a group of Nicholas County livestock producers on Monday night of this week at the court house. The meeting was arranged by the Nicholas County Farm Bureau, the County Brucellosis Committee, and Dr. W. G. Irvin, former assistant state veterinarian.

Livestock producers who attended this meeting unanimously voted their approval to Nicholas County participating in the State Brucellosis Control Program. In order that all livestock producers of Nicholas County below given an opportunity to learn more about the facts in the control of Brucellosis, commonly called Bang's disease, a countywide mass meeting has been scheduled for Thursday night, April 10 at 7:00 p.m., slow time. This meeting will be held at the Nicholas County high school. Dr. Robert Singer, state veterinarian has agreed to be present at the meeting and to discuss Brucellosis Control and how Nicholas County may participate in the program.

There is presently under way a national program for the eradication of Brucellosis in cattle. Four Kentucky counties have already been declared Brucellosis free. About two-thirds of all Kentucky counties are either participating or petitioning the State which will assure these counties of being free of Brucellosis upon completion of the program.

By Nicholas County deciding to participate, local livestock producers will be joining forces with other counties, the State of Kentucky, and the Nation, as a whole in the eradication of Brucellosis. Brucellosis causes millions of dollars of losses to livestock producers annually. When man is infected with this bacteria it causes Undulant Fever, which is a chronic serious human disease. One of the chief ways that man contacts the disease is by using milk from the cows that have Brucellosis.

Presiding at the Brucellosis meeting were James Lowe, president of the Farm Bureau and G. E. Curtsinger, chairman of the County Brucellosis Committee, acting as cochairman. Local Agencies represented and cooperating in the program were Jack Ping, local Health Sanitarian. Richard R. LeMaster, assistant county agent, Dr. W. G. Irvin, former assistant state veterinarian, Foster Pumphrey, agriculture teacher, and W. T. Straw, county agent.

101 nabbed at cock fight

PROCESSING ROOM—Cockfight patrons waited here before being admitted to the County Judge's chamber where fines were assessed.—Mercury photos

AWAITS HIS TURN—To be fingerprinted, Charles T. Wagoner, who collected cockfight admissions.

INSTIGATOR OF THE RAID—At left is Sheriff John W. Anderson who with the State Police nabbed 101 persons at the cockfight.

State Police arrested 101 persons in a raid Friday night on a cock fight arena on the Stoney Creek road near Blue Licks.

The men, herded into two school buses, were brought to Carlisle about 2:30 a.m. Saturday and were assessed fines in Nicholas County Court totaling $1,968.

Lt. Homer Howard led the raid by 18 state policemen and Sheriff John Anderson and Bill Dollins, deputy. Among the 18 officers were three plainclothes men who were inside the arena.

Howard said the farm, a 100 farm of Sam Wagoner, 50, had been converted into an elaborate cock fight arena. The lighting rig had been fashioned with concrete and a grandstand had been built around it.

The raid occurred about 10:45 p.m. Howard said Wagoner was charging $3 for admission. No money was confiscated.

The Nicholas County Judge said he knew of no legal basis for confiscating the money collected for admissions or used for betting.

An estimated 50 game cocks were being held for fights at the ring when officers arrived.

Wagoner was fined $140 for permitting operation of a cockfight. Five other men were fined $27.50 each on charges of fighting cocks. The others paid $10 each for breach of peace.

State Police said those other than Wagoner who were booked were:

Robert Sturgeon, Vivian Edwards, James Ward, Clarence Brumat, Herbert Cummins, Nancy Pharez and James McCullough, all of Lexington; Floyd Sargent, Carl Hughes, Bobby Rankin, Billy Gilmer, Lewis Roe, Charles Fryman, J.
