more interested in the large annual aspect of his profession, he believes he would do better in his native state of Kentucky by practicing in the small animal field.

Sticking to his studies, Clark reflects the tenacity that carried him to stardom with the Wildcats. His books keep him up after midnight almost every night, but he does not complain. He keeps digging.

This is the kind of thing that made him show up at Kentucky as a 150 pound freshman with no scholarship.

"I was told that if I showed anything I would get the scholarship. I guess it was Coach Bryant who said 'whoop and holler' that got me going because I received the scholarship a little later. I also took him on all of it and say truthfully that whatever I am now I owe to my Dad and to Bryant.

"Speaking of Coach Bryant, you won't see him smile during a football season. The game is dead serious to him. To his players, I would say that when Coach comes into the dressing room at halftime of a game he is singing "Love Lifted Me,' watch out! Something's gonna blow!

"Another thing I believe is that Coach Bryant is over all the Coach Bryant will have a squad of 26 to 30 men. He will keep the boys who really want to play. Whether you are good or not at the outset, he wants you if you have the desire. Four years with him will make a good player of a boy.

"At Kentucky we had a freshman squad of 61. Nine of these men graduated four years later. They wanted to play."

When Auburn and Kentucky play, Clark has mixed emotions whether it be football or basketball.

He believes Southeastern basketball is on par with any he's now. "The whole league seems balanced. It has come of age," he added.

Asked about his greatest football thrill, Clark said it occurred in the Kentucky and SMU game of 1951. "Babe Parilli handed off to me, and I was able to go 76 yards for a touchdown. Bob Gain was offside, however, and it was called back. Yet, I got my greatest kick from that run. Just playing football was a thrill. I wish I had it to do again."

From Carlisle, the future veterinarian is married to the former Jean Anne Blumer, Lexington. They have a three year old girl, Cyle, and a six months old son, Emery Clark. III. "I hope my boy wants to play football," Clark concluded wistfully.

A brief look at the grid career of No. 26 shows he was a sturdy little ball carrier of 160 pounds. One of his specialties, however, was as a pass snagging halfback. He grabbed 25 of Parrilli's aerials during his three years for 219 yards and five touchdowns. He was highly valuable as a punt return specialist too.

Looking back with fondness on his port, the future Dr. Clark does not dwell upon it. The future is too near at hand for him.

she attempted to assist him to bed, but he refused to go.

Mrs. Story said her husband walked into their bedroom with the pistol, threatened to "shoot the plaster off the walls," and then pointed the weapon at his head and shot himself, officers said. The bullet struck Story above the right eye.

Mrs. Story said she ran from the bedroom to call police and did not know what happened after the first shot was fired.

Police said they arrived to find Story seated, fully clothed, on a chair in the bedroom. They said he also was wounded three times in the left leg.

Patrolman Joe Mattingly said all six of the cartridges in the pistol apparently had been fired recently.

Dr. Story is a native of Nicholas County and members of the family have been at his bedside.

Four injured in accidents on U. S. 68

Herrin which was parked alongside the road in front of Herrin's garage. Wagoner suffered possible cuts and bruises and Ruby J. Gulley, 3, Mansfield, Ohio, suffered multiple cuts.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard D. Newman, Columbus, Ohio, suffered lacerations and cuts on the foreheads in an accident involving a car driven by Elwood L. Couch, Lexington. The Newmarks were passengers in a car driven by Couch.

The Gulley child and Mr. Newmark were still patients at the hospital Monday.

The injured were taken to the hospital by Sheriff John Anderson, and his deputies.

13,000 farm lives lost to accidents

"When you work for safety—safety works for you."

That's the theme of the 15th annual National Farm Safety Week, which will be observed July 20-26. It is cosponsored by the National Safety Council and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Purpose of the special week, which has been proclaimed by President Eisenhower, is to prevent accidents to farm families —in the home, in the field and on the highway.

Accidents to farm residents take nearly 13,000 lives and injure more than a million persons annually. Farming has more deaths each year than any other major industry.

Many organizations concerned with agriculture and farm life will take part in the campaign.

The National Safety Council urges everyone with an interest in the welfare of farm residents to participate in National Farm Safety Week, and to promote accident prevention the year 'round," it said.

Bike riders must be alert expert says

Frankfort (SPECIAL)- A field representative for the state department of Accident Control warns that spring brings a need for greater alertness for bike riders.

Alton G. Evans, Accident Control Field Representative emphasized, if your child has a bike, be sure he knows how and where to ride it and then see that he rides it that way.

Holding the motorist responsible will not get your child back nor mend broken bones, he declared. Evans urged that parents be certain they know the bicycle laws before attempting to teach children.

"Be a quick review," he suggested, "remember this:

1. Bicycles must be ridden on the right hand side of the street with traffic. NOT on the left side against traffic.

2. Bike riders must obey traffic signs, signals and rules the same as motorists.

3. Bike riders must not carry passengers either on handle bars, seat, frame or luggage carrier.

4. Bike riders must not ride more than two abreast. It is better to ride single file.

5. Bike riders must not carry packages or other objects in their hands or arms.

6. Bikes must be lighted or kept off the street after sun down.

7. Bikes must be equipped with a warning device—horn or bell.

Twinning not desired

Is birth of twin calves in dairy herds a desirable happening?

Probably not, says E. C. Scheidenhelm, UK Extension Service dairyman, if results of a research project in Pennsylvania are conclusive.

In the test he says, workers found that cows having twins produced considerably ignore milk in the lactation period PRECEDING the birth of the twins, and that it required more services to make the dam of the twins conceive again AFTER the birth of the twins.

CHS band gets to go to Derby Festival

The Carlisle High School Band under the direction of John B. Mayer, did a fine job of representing Carlisle in the Pegasus Parade in Louisville, Friday night, April 29. The parade, which included 20 bands, 35 floats, 125 horsemen, 15 specialty groups, and 2,635 participants was a feature of the Kentucky Derby Festival being held in Louisville this year for the first time.

The Carlisle band was selected as one of the 20 bands from all over the State of Kentucky, and the pride and enthusiasm of the band members was expressed by the willing and generous assistance of the various merchants of Carlisle in helping the band obtain money for transportation and uniforms. The following persons and organizations contributed funds toward the cost of hiring a 45-passenger Greyhound bus to send the band to Louisville in style: Chamber of Commerce, PTA, Younger Women's Club, First National Bank, The Deposit Bank, Giffin Manufacturing Company, St. Johns Redemptorist Fathers, Band Parents, teachers, and the High School Pep Club.

The parade was viewed by 90,000 persons lining both sides of the 2.5 mile parade route.

DEATHS

The death recently of Senator Kerr Scott of North Carolina brought forth the observation that seven solons from the state have died in office in the last 12 years.

Well, Kentucky's record is not as bad as unfortunate. Here's a list dating back 10 years.

Alben Barkley, Virgil Chapman, Garrett Withers, and Tom Underwood. A few years prior to that, M. M. Logan passed away.

YEARS AND LIFE:

The above item brings to mind the prayer recently offered in the Senate by Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, the chaplain.

"We have spent much of our time," he said, "trying to add years to our life but little time in adding life to our years."

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

By Gil Kingsbury

PRICE SUPPORT LOANS:

Bills are pending in the House and Senate to limit farm price support payments to $50,000 per farm. That set us to wondering how many Kentucky farmers got that much federal money.

Well, not very many. In four years time there were only 11 payments of $50,000 or more went to Kentuckians. No names were given in the law and the crop was not designated. However, we'd guess that the loan went on a corn crop.

Some payments, but not in the Blue Grass state, were as high as a quarter of a million, mostly to cooperatives.

SMOKING AND THE SOVIETS:

Dr. A. Y. Lloyd, executive secretary of the Tobacco Export Association, has an interesting question to ask.

"Where," he asks, "is smoking on the greatest increase?"

The answer: Answer Cigarette smoking has increased more behind the Iron Curtain than in the free nations.

World production of cigarettes rose during five years by 50 percent. But in the free nations, the increase was limited to 20 percent. The Soviet record is all the more amazing.

THE BIGGEST SHOW-OFF
By F. L. Rowley

ART FISHER was the biggest show-off in the world. I wouldn't have minded the show-off he wasn't also my best friend. Art was the fastest runner on the ball field, the best swimmer, even at the head of our class at school.

That was before Miss Baker visited our school. Miss Baker was some kind of inspector for the State Board of Education. When we heard that she was coming we got the shakes.

Art Fisher was overjoyed. We had been told that each student must prepare a one sheet essay for Miss Baker's approval. Since Art also excelled in English this was just another chance for him to show off.

I felt sorry for Miss Simpson when class started. She was trying so hard to conceal her nervousness. She placed the sheaf of papers reflecting our best efforts on the window ledge. The window sill was open so she laid a glass paper weight on top of the pile.

Charlie Bates sat near the window. Charlie had never set world acclaim for his brilliance. He studied the papers thoughtfully.

Soon we heard the sharp click of a woman's heel at the end of the corridor. We faced the door expectantly.

A rustling sound broke the silence.

"The papers!" Miss Simpson cried frantically.

It was too late! A strong wind had carried the precious papers to the ceiling where they hung for a moment before fluttering downward in every direction.

We forgot about Miss Baker. We were after the papers. Some stood on seats to catch the papers as they came down.

"Jiggers!" cried Charlie Bates.

We faced the door and froze. Miss Simpson was pale.

The silence that followed was one of despair. Miss Baker walked across to the big desk, pulled out the chair, and seated herself.

Miss Baker studied us for a long moment.

"When I was a little girl," she began suddenly in a voice free of all authority, "I attended a new dress to go to a party."

Miss Simpson blinked. Not a word about the sparrow.

"We were poor," Miss Baker went on, "but my mother managed to buy some pretty material. She made a dress. It took her 37 hours and two weeks, but it was the loveliest thing I had ever seen. The night when I was ready to go to the party my brother accidentally spilled a cup of cocoa over the front of my dress. It was ruined.

"The little girl next door was rich. She had a beautiful new store dress she wore to the same party. When she heard me crying she came over and gave me her new dress to wear to the party.

"You don't feel bad about what happened here this morning. The flood plans often go awry; sometimes they go even worse of it.

A sigh rolled across the room. Miss Simpson smiled.

"Now I should like to see one of your flying papers."

"Here's a good one!" cried Art Fisher.

We all groaned inwardly. The show-off was at it again.

Miss Baker reached for the paper. It had a boat mark on it. As she read it we began to laugh. Before she had finished it we were all howling. It was the funniest thing I had ever heard. But it was the end that made us gasp.

"And this student's signature," said Miss Baker wiping her eyes, "is Charlie Bates." Well done, Charlie.
