Searching questions

A House Committee recently held hearings on proposed bills authorizing the Federal government to give or loan money to the states in order to extend the time during which unemployed workers may obtain weekly unemployment benefit payments.

One of the witnesses was Rowland Jones, Jr., president of the American Retail Federation. He pointed out that in most states the maximum duration of benefits is now 26 weeks. Then he said: "Let us imagine that maximum duration in most states was not 26, but 30 or 36 or 39 weeks right now. What would happen as we go through the economic readjustment of 1957-1958? Unemployment would rise as it has now. Average duration would have increased and more workers would have exhausted their benefits just as is happening now with a 26-week maximum. What would have been the indicated action then? Should duration have been raised to 52 weeks or 104 weeks at the first sign of increasing unemployment? Or would we still be talking about a Federal dole for 13 weeks? Why? What are we after? What kind of an unemployment insurance program do we want? How does the increase in unemployment experienced in recent months justify a basic change in our entire philosophy? Why after years of constant and progressive improvement in our state systems do we need to abandon the uniquely American principles of unemployment insurance and institute a Federal dole which is based neither on eligibility requirements nor on proof of need?"

These are searching questions. Federalization insurance, no matter how modest the scale at the beginning, would grow like a rolling snowball. The dole principle would be established, an unknown cost to the taxpayers. The burden on business would be extremely heavy, at the expense of investment, expansion and employment.

To quote Mr. Jones again: "Our task is to concentrate on constructive measures designed to stimulate our economy and provide more employment rather than to dissipate our energies on devising a dole system for the American worker."

Economic salvation depends on people

Are the people of the United States smart enough to learn by experience?

Samuel Lubell, an analyst of the state of mind in the United States, says that "the public's strongest single desire is for a halt in the upward spiral of prices, wages, and profits"—that people are strongly opposed to another nation-wide round of wage boosts because they would mean price boosts.

In a statement before the Senate Finance Committee, Bernard M. Baruch said: "We are now suffering a hangover after a long inflationary binge. As is always the case with hang overs, we have only ourselves to blame. More of the 'hair of the dog' is no remedy. It only increases suffering and delays recovery.

"If industry and labor continue to push up wage, price and profit levels, they will price themselves out of the market. Consumer resistance will grow, further depressing economic activity and adding to unemployment.

"Nothing would be more effective in turning the tide than to halt the never-ending spiral of wages and prices. The best stimulant to our economy would come from price reductions. The consumer, who has no lobby or bargaining agent, is belatedly rebelling against having every wage and cost increase passed on to him.

"In the last analysis, we face a test of character and common sense. . . . Nothing is more dangerous than this notion that economic salvation lies through Government intercession. . . . Let us not turn always to the Government for succor, but remember rather that a free government depends always upon the people for sustenance."

ideas from other e-ditors

From The Champion, Custer, Texas: There's a minor stew . . . in the Senate in Washington . . . on whether or not to install a public address system. Like nearly everything else that's ever come up in the Senate there's some disagreement on the matter. Correspondents in the Press Gallery often have a hard time understanding some of the Senators, who are not gifted with the voices of top segregents.

This minor matter is of little importance compared to our legislator's being heard among their constituents back home—that is from the standpoint of vote getting and perpetuating themselves in office.

A truly conscientious Senator or Representative in Washington is faced daily with the problem of deciding where public duty ends and self promotion starts and vice versa. ◀

To a degree these phases of public life are intertwined. Former Vice President John Nance Garner was one of the few of American's public figures who had the knack of starting and ending each of these problems at the right point. Overshadowed in a way by the great personality of Franklin D. Roosevelt, he was variously called an "evil old man, a back-stage manipulator" and lots worse things.

Garner came in for his just share of praise also by both Republicans and Democrats alike. His ultimate aims and his devotion to his country were never questioned. He was and still is regarded as a great statesman.

Since Garner's time at the Capitol, the headline seekers seem to be more prevalent and audible than ever before. When a Congressman goes down the line for some piece of legislation that's good, there's no crime in telling his constituents back home know about it. When he votes on a measure as he thinks the people who elected him would want him to.

The chief means of notifying those people back home is the newspapers which they read and from that situation has developed the practice of advising the newspapers on their activities.

The job of separating the propaganda from the sincere, honest efforts of a lawmaker is a hard one. If newspaper space permitted maybe the best route would be to print it all—the well meant actions of considered judgement and the personal ballyhoo too. That perhaps would let the self-centered publicity seeker hang himself with a galley of type.

MOTHER'S DAY

This fond heart, dear mother, take.
Thine it is, in word and thought,
Thine by constant kindness bought.

—McGuffey's Second Eclectic Reader.

—yap—

In All Her Glory!

"Rain, rain, go away, come again some other day" we memorized from one of McGuffey's eclectic readers years ago; then came Spring. The same is true today—it rains and we have to have a little fire to be comfortable here in May—but 'tis Spring again! Was the grass ever so green or the violets so blue (or the weeds so high)! A delegation of neighbor children recently called on me, bringing all the mud that could stick to little feet, but with them came the largest bunch of violets I've ever seen. Couldn't find anything on the place large enough to hold them—hunted up old vases that haven't held a flower in years. The little home could have been mistaken for Thompson's Greenhouse, by some stretch of imagination, as such bouquets mean no more than weeds can convey—bare feet, fishin' worms, violets and true love—it's Spring!

The WORLD OUTDOORS

WHAT about the popular sport of fishing" Is it REALLY a "lazy man's" game?

If has long been the habit of the average fisherman to picture the man dozing on the bank, his fishing line tied to his toe with an eddy in one arm or with his bell-equipped fishing rod propped on a fork stick.

An untrue picture? Well, let's take a look at it. There is such a fisherman. To him, fishing and relaxation are one and the same word. The solitude of the river bank, the warmth of the sun, the blue of the sky, and the sweet pleasure of doing absolutely nothing; this is all a part of "fishing" as far as he is concerned.

Yet, this type of fisherman is in the decided minority. The modern, fish-seeking angler will think nothing of travelling four to five hundred miles by car, half as many miles by water, with land portages of 50 or 60 miles thrown in; all before he even sets his fishing line.

The short-trip angler, who is probably going to drive 30 or 60 miles to his favorite lake or stream, will stay up half the night to get his "bait."

And what about the fisherman who uses artificial lures? He will, you say, since all he must do is tie on his lure and begin fishing? Another lazy man? If you think so, consider the fact that in an average day's fishing, the artificial fisherman makes hundreds and hundreds of casts. Try the same motion in your own living room and see how long your arm can stand it without going limp.

Fishing is like everything else, the individual sets his own pace. But, regardless, fishing is fun—and anyone who has read this far is either a fisherman or the type that is curious enough to go out and give it a whirl.

TODAY'S Meditation

Read Acts 16:9-13

Have no anxiety about anything, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God. (Philippians 4:6. RSV.)

A contractor and a future home owner were discussing plans for a new house. Looking at a rough sketch of the floor plan, the contractor asked "What is this small extra room marked 'prayer room'? I haven't seen any plans like this before except possibly in magazines. I never thought I would be asked to build one"

The young man replied, "God has created all the raw materials from which everything is made that will go into my new home. I want a place in it where I can, undisturbed, thank Him each day, for it and all His other blessings."

"I think you have a wonderful idea," the contractor said. "I would like a chance to build this prayer room into your home."

When we omit a special prayer room to built in every home, prayer itself in the home can be an everyday occurrance. There should be a place for it.

PRAYER: Our Father, we would express now our thanks to Thee for all Thy blessings. Teach us to give ourselves to prayer daily in our homes to thank Thee for Thy love and guidance, to seek Thy will for our lives, to give us Thy divine help in all our undertakings. In Jesus' name and for His sake. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Washington Reports to YOUR CONGRESSMAN JOHN WATTS

The Transportation Industry

The fact that this segment of our Economy, and more particularly the Railroads, have been confronted with economic difficulties for some little time has been a matter of exhaustive study and exploration by the respective House and Senate Committees on Interstate Commerce. The acuteness of the situation due to the general downward economic trends incident to the present recession has even been recognized by the President.

The Goat—Agriculture

Recently a Subcommittee of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee held hearings on H R. 5823, which if enacted would limit the agricultural exemptions under the Motor Carrier Act to the point in the marketing processes where the producer or the grower first loses possession of the commodity. Proponents of the measure sought to justify their action upon two major premises: (1) That the interest of the farmer ceases when he disposes of his product, and (2) that the extent to which the exemption provisions have been applied has substantially adversely affected the business of the Railroads and certificated carriers.

On April 25 we appeared before this Subcommittee and evidenced our strong opposition to the measure and to any proposal that would so confine the application of the agriculture exemptions.

Farmer's Interest Continues To Consumer

The first premise of the proponents is directly contrary to the almost uniformly accepted economic premise that the price which the farmer obtains for his product is directly and substantially affected by the cost of transporting such product to the consuming market. And, certainly, no one will argue that increased transportation costs will not fall on the farmer or the consumer.

Railroads Not Hurt

Experience under the agricultural exemptions indicate only a few instances in which the Railroads were adversely affected As an illustration, prior to fresh poultry being declared an exempt commodity, the Railroads handled less than one per cent of the total shipments of fresh poultry.

Thus, it is perfectly clear that the failure of the Railroads to get more of this business was not due to any unfairness from the agricultural exemption. The elimination of agricultural exemptions would mean increased transportation costs.

Railroads Need Help—But Not At Agriculture's Expense

We are fully cognizant of the Railroads' plight and are ready and willing to help out in any and every way that we can. But in view of today's economic situation, the farmer's depressing economic experience over the past several years; the high cost of living, it certainly would be utter folly to engage upon a program that would further decrease the farmer's income, increase the consumer's cost without materially benefiting the sagging economy of the Railroads. Let's help the Railroads by more feasible methods which will not affect our tottering agricultural economy.

Exemptions Should Only Be For Actual Agriculture Needs

After my appearance before this Committee, it is pleasing to note that the Secretary of Commerce, Weeks, and the Senate Subcommittee substantially suggested the same solution that I did, which was for the Congress to evidence the thought that the agricultural exemption provisions only apply as they are today understood. There should be no further broadening of them. Certainly, no one desires that they be extended beyond the actual need of Agriculture.

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

By Gil Kingsbury

ABOUT TAXES

In the muddle of all this talk about an income and excise tax reduction, one senator comes out with some information on delinquent taxes.

Do you know—for example—that 11,300 Kentuckians have failed to pay Uncle Sam taxes in 1957? Those folks owe more than 10 million dollars.

In spite of that, the 1957 figure is better than the one for 1956. In fact, the overall picture shows recent improvement.

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

Teenage Doldrums Call for Patience

At a party a few weeks ago a number of parents were discussing their teenagers. One father complained that his son was too lazy to eat; a mother complained that her daughter was nearly as bad. It turns out that both the kids are fifteen. To me that explained a great deal.

Have you ever noticed how boys and girls about 15 years old get a case of what I call the "doldrums"—just plain listless, dull and bored? This teenage disease isn't confined to any one section of the country, or any one type of teenager. They all get it.

From the parent's viewpoint this is a trying time. Their sons and daughters are inclined to be difficult. They lack all inspiration to help around the house; they are moody; they are unhappy. Everything the parent does to help the situation seems to make it worse.

There's really no reason to worry about it. It is a stage that teenagers go through. They're still children, and yet, are physically young men and women. They are usually in the second grade of high school and the freshmen avoid them and the upper classmen ignore them. They are just plain lonesome.

Fortunately a little time helps. They grow out of the "doldrums." Parents who don't realize this and try to do something about it often wind up with a rebellious teenager on their hands. Take it easy and have patience. This is one stage in the teenager's development when you will have to give in more than parents are inclined to.

If you have a teenage problem you would like to discuss with Dr. Crane, address your letter to DOCTOR AND THE TEENAGERS, NATIONAL NEWSPAPER SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.
