IN MEMORIUM

In Memory of Billy B. Vice, Who departed December 15, 1951

Oh, Billy we miss you so much. That Word's can never say. And the longer you are gone. We miss you more each day. Seven years ago we went with you. It was on Christmas day. We never dreamed of such a thing you would soon be gone away.

I get so blue and lonesome. And I am sometime happy too. For I know it wont be very long. Until God takes me home with you. So sleep on little Darling. In that place we call no Cold. But it is warm for you Dear. For its a home thats made of gold.

We go to Bethel Cemetery and sit beside you. And I always weep and pray. It eases the pain in my heart. Tho a word you can not Say.

The Sun is getting low now Billy, And I must go home and pine. Until the Lord calls me home too and I'll hold your hand in mine. So good-bye we'll meet again. For my dear Lord I will obey. We'll rest in that Home he has prepared, and there for ever we'll Stay.

Former teacher writes novel

Walter Tevis, who has taught school in Carlisle, will have his first novel published by Harper & Brothers on January 7. Titled "The Hustler," the book explores the world of the big time pool player.

Tevis, who teaches a course in creative writing at the University of Kentucky, has been called "the world's foremost authority on pool hustling."

It was during the days he studied days at the University of Kentucky that he first became acquainted with the game, while working as a poolhall attendant to help support his income while doing graduate work for his master's degree in English.

The pool parlor became the scene of his first published short stories and his work has subsequently appeared in Esquire, Redbook, Cosmopolitan and The Saturday Evening Post. He lives in Erlanger, with his wife and two children.

Word was received Wednesday morning that Santa Clause would make another appearance here Saturday afternoon at the request of local merchants.

So those children who were unable to be in Carlisle last Saturday may now have an opportunity to see the white bearded gentleman and place their many and varied orders.

Conditions Of Gas Victims Satisfactory

Two persons overcome by natural gas in a home on the Clark County-Fayette County line last Thursday morning were listed in satisfactory condition at Good Samaritan hospital, Lexington.

The two were identified as Charles Prather, 31, and his mother, Mrs. Ernest Prather 60, former residents of Carlisle. Members of a city first-aid squad said the county line passes through the yard of the Prather home located on the Combs Ferry Road.

The firemen said both Prather and his mother were unconscious when they arrived. They said an unidentified man found the two in the house and shut off the gas.

The aid squad administered oxygen to the two for more than an hour before they were taken to Lexington, in a private ambulance.

The firemen said they were unable to determine the origin of the leaking gas.
