CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The vital importance of following the example of the Master, Christ Jesus, in our thoughts and actions will be emphasized Sunday at Christian Science services.
Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Sacrament" is the Golden Text from I Corinthians (5:8) "Let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."
Selections to be read from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include the following (37: 22-25): "It is possible,—yea, it is the duty and privilege of every child, man, and woman,—to follow in some degree the example of the Master by the demonstration of Truth and Life, of health and holiness."
From the Bible will be read the following (Mark 16:15): "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

The Carlisle Methodist Church is cooperating in the World Wide Church Attendance Movement. The special emphasis will run from January to Easter.
The theme of the movements this year is "Let God Have His Way—at church, at home, at work." Each member is urged to attend Sunday School and Divine Worship each Sunday. Also, to observe family devotions in the home.
The pastor, Rev. G. H. Bierley, stated a series of messages would be given during this period on "Our Faith," "Our Faith In Christ," "Our Faith In The Holy Spirit," "Our Faith In The Church," "Our Faith In Forgiveness" and "Our Faith In Immortality."

New dollar bills join parade of U. S. paper money

The old-look dollar bill, as cut down in 1929 and later redesigned, is in line for gradual retirement.
In the United States Bureau of Engraving and Printing, new presses are now turning out this year's model at the rate of 280,000 a day. Nearly four times as fast as the old machines, they print 32 instead of 18 bills to a sheet. .
By October 1, Director Henry Holtzclaw estimates, more than 25,000,000 examples of America's latest small-fry paper currency will be available for distribution. In time the new bills will supplant old ones returned to the government for funeral-pyre rites.

Basic Design Unchanged

The basic design of the 1957 dollar, showing George Washington's portrait on the face and both sides of the Great Seal of the United States on the back, will remain the same, says the National Geographic Society. But there are several noteworthy changes

The phrase. In God We Trust, has been added in accordance with the 1955 Act of Congress that required all future paper currency, as well as coins, to carry the motto.
Quality of the bills will be improved, since the new presses can reproduce the required fine-engraving work on dry paper instead of having to use the damp material of the past.
The dry process also eliminates former shrinkage. Hence George Washington's face will be slightly fuller, although he looks out from a steadily contracting dollar in terms of buying power.
Finally, the new dollar bill will carry the name of the present Secretary of the Treasury, Robert B. Anderson, who replaced George M. Humphrey. And on its face will appear the date series 1957-A, a date that represents not the time of printing but the latest change in design.
Letters A B C D and so on follow the series date stand for successive signatures of United States treasurers or Treasury secretaries.

"Techee" No Joke

Most of the roughly 1,292 000 000 dollar bills now in circulation bear a 1953 series date. Rare dollars of this and earlier series are collectors' items. A 1934 issue signed by U. S. Register Huston B. Teehee, an Oklahoman of part-Indian descent, is good for more than a laugh. In good condition one such bill may be worth $100.
Genuine freak bills rate high in collecting circles. Reported have been a dollar bill with the George Washington face on both sides and an "81 bill" combining one and ten-dollar designs.
The fast-moving everyday dollar has an average life expectancy of 12 months. Officially pronounced too limp to carry on about 1,200 000 000 such bills are annually turned with as many precautions taken in the destruction as in the production and distribution of the currency.
The art of salvaging mutilated and charred currency is another complex activity of the Government's money handlers.
Using tweezers, needles, blades, and magnifying glasses, the Treasury's trained women technicians each year reconstruct millions of dollars worth of bills from bits and lumps of paper most laymen would judge junk.
Less than two-fifths of an original bill is worthless. Between two-and three-fifths brings half face value, three-fifths and more, full value.
Payments have been made for bills baked with a pie, petrified after long burial, sent to dry cleaners, whirled in washing machines, and swallowed by a goat.

Proof necessary for old-age benefit claims

Self-employed farm operators as well as other persons engaging in trade or business covered by the social security law who have reached retirement age (men 65, women 62) and plan to apply for social security old-age insurance benefits in the early months of 1958 should bring with them the necessary evidence in support of their claims, according to R. A. Tweedy, District Manager of the Lexington social security office.
Copies of the 1956 and 1957 tax returns which must be retained by our office together with cancelled checks or some other form of evidence that the social security tax has been paid must be submitted, Tweedy said. To prevent at least inconvenience in the future, he suggests that an extra copy of the 1957 tax return be made at the time the original is completed.
Proof of your age must also be furnished if you have a wife who is at least 62 years of age she should come along bringing some proof of her age as well. If the required supporting evidence is furnished at the time the claim is filed, undue delay in the payment of the claim as well as additional contacts with the claimant may be avoided, Tweedy said.
The Lexington social security office is located in the Bank of Commerce Building, Main and Cheapside Streets.

BRAISED VENISON IN SOUR CREAM

Mrs. Carlie N. Nichols of Augusta, Me., sends this recipe for braised venison in soup cream and says that it is her husband's favorite recipe. We have tried it and can understand its appeal!

Cut 2 lbs. venison in 1½-inch pieces and brown in 4 tablespoons bacon drippings. Remove meat and in remaining fat saute 1 cup diced carrot, 1 cup diced celery and 2-3 cup sliced onions until the latter are transparent. Place meat and vegetables in casserole then in frying pan bring to a boil 1½ cups water, 1 cup orange juice, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1-3 cup Burgandy wine, ½ teaspoon garlic salt, 8 peppercorns, 1 bay leaf and ½ teaspoon allspice. Simmer for a few minutes and then add to casserole, cover and place in a slow oven (300 degrees) for 1 hour.
Place meat in bowl and in the frying pan make a roux of 4 tablespoons butter and 4 tablespoons flour. Gradually add liquid from casserole, stirring constantly until it thickens, then pour in 1 cup sour cream. When thoroughly heated, pour over meat.

COMMENT

The following is from the New York Times. I thought you would enjoy reading it. Rather encouraging. I think. K.H.

JANUARY

One thing about January we expect the worst of it, including freeze and thaw and snow and ice and all the unpleasant attributes of winter. Another thing is that it is seldom as bad as we expect. And most hopeful of all it marks a turn for the better. The days are getting longer, fractionally longer at first, but the change will be visible before the end of the month. And that means that up there ahead, beyond February, lies the vernal equinox. It is instinctive of man to think more pleasantly of spring in the offing than of winter at hand.
January is a kind of slate wiped clean for another year's record. But whatever else is set down, the old familiar facts persist. By tradition, January is the depth of winter; but in it are all kinds of continuities and new beginnings. The trees wisely limit their time now, but in February the sap will begin to move in the maples. The peepers, full of the instinctive wisdom of the ages, now hibernate; but in March they will be trilling in all the marshlands. Buds lie low on the bough now, but in April they will fatten toward leaf, and the gray woodland will begin to brighten with hepatica and anemone. And by then the robins will return, and all the outriders of avian spring. By then January will be only a chilly memory.
But here is that January, real as an icicle but actually no more enduring. January is a phase, a kind of cold maturing, a rest between seasons. Once it is really begun, there isn't a holiday worth the mention. But it does mark the turn toward better things. That in itself is something to celebrate.—New York Times.
