Are you a good driver?

Ask yourself if you are a good driver? Chance are you will answer "yes" whether you know it or not.

It seems that the majority of drivers—even those with traffic violations records—consider themselves above average drivers. Walter G. Barlow, executive vice president of Cognition Research Corp., Princeton, N. J., told the Media Advisory Group of the President's Commission on Traffic Safety.

Modern techniques of rehabilitation are costly and it is the purpose of the March of Dimes to finance the care. The cost will run to many millions—let's not forget those who are not so lucky as we. Let's remember, "Survival is not enough." Let's give.

From-An editor's random thoughts

Up to find the sun shining again after five days of misty skies. And in the breath of the morning I find a hot spring, a delicate and faint aroma of glenside fields moistened by April rains. It is but a hint, but a reassuring momentary shift in the weather, yet the song sparrows has fall and a mooring bank that has had snow, and then at my bench lunch course brightens of maple trees. From among bare branches of maple trees, the song sparrows has fall and a mooring bank that has had snow, and then at my bench lunch course brightens of maple trees.

Everyone, actually 100% of the persons interviewed who are above average as well as the road, "Twenty percent considered themselves "definitely above the average of other drivers they know," 44% thought of themselves as "a little above average" and only 2% felt they were "a little below average." There were no takers for the rank of "below average driver" or "a little below average."

Thousands of communities in every part of the land are observing the 20th anniversary of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. It was money provided through the
