A mac-modern miracle

The Salk vaccine is a modern miracle—for those who use it. But for the Salk vaccine, thousands of men, women and children now walking, running, playing and working would be hospitalized and treatment centers trying desperately to regain the use of ruined arms and legs. These people are still blind, very human beings because they protected themselves against polio paralysis by three shots of vaccine.

Actually, there is nothing miraculous about the miracle of the Salk vaccine. The vaccine introduces into the blood stream tiny doses of polio virus so weakened that it can no longer cause paralysis. But this "killed" virus will cause people to buy in their own antibodies that fight back against the polio virus.

Then, when the polio virus enters the body, the antibodies go to work. The result might be at worst a slight fever or a slight sore throat and after a day or two the infection is back to normal. The antibodies have won the fight against the deadly virus.

The miracle of the Salk vaccine is a man-made miracle. It was made by a man who lived deep inside nature's mysteries to find out

Sen. Barkley addresses crowd; Moorefield company dissolves

Thursday, July 10, 1958
All made converging in the town of Moorefield, Wednesday morning at Senator Allen W. Barkley. In his address to the crowd, he mentioned the economic situation in the August primary. Barkley was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. A. B. Chandler. A total of 2,304 head of livestock was disposed of by farmers Tuesday at the weekly stock sale market.

Ernest Ward, formerly of Carlisle, is in the Halden hospital at Cincinnati, where he underwent an operation on his eye Wednesday.

What caused polio and then nature's protective forces to combat the crippling disease so often caused by the disease in the past. The vaccine merely triggers the body's own defensive mechanisms. Once started, these mechanisms can win the fight almost every time.

Ad in the paper

One of the most valuable tools that has been used for combating the recent resurgence in the advertising power of the home town newspaper. At the end of every production line stands the consumer, and national property is but the sum total of local property. In thousands of communities all across the country because of editorial comment encouraging people to buy in their own neighborhood or in their own home town and a result, the publisher of national programs undertaken by local merchants.
