But...Would CHRIST Call You A Christian?

There is an amazing difference of opinion today as to what constitutes a real Christian.
One man regards himself as a good Christian because he applies the Golden Rule to everyday living. Another professes to be a follower of Christ even though he believes only part of the Savior's teaching. And some who call themselves Christian even go so far as to reject his divinity.
Too many people, unfortunately, are setting up their own standards of Christian character and Christian living . . . forgetting that Christ Himself set these standards for us.
The result is that many sincere people are confused . . . and are depriving themselves with a minimum, or "so-so" kind of Christian living.
The Catholic Church teaches that the mere belief in Christ is not enough. For if it were, why did Christ take the trouble to show us by precept and example how we should live? Nor can we regard His teachings as just a social doctrine . . . subject to our individual amendments . . . when He made it so plain that our very salvation depends on living as He prescribes, not as we choose.
If you want to find out how good a Christian you really are, read—and read again and again—Christ's Sermon on the Mount. And if you need only the introduction . . . including the Beatitudes . . . you should realize how far short of Christ's standards are the standards which men set for themselves.
Perhaps you may feel that the ideals voiced by the Savior nearly 2,000 years ago cannot be applied in our modern times. And possibly you will not understand the practical meaning of Christ's references to "the meek," or "the poor in spirit," or "they who hunger and thirst for justice." In that case, we are happy to help you—without cost or obligation.
We shall be glad to send you free on your request, an interesting pamphlet explaining the meaning of the words Christ used in the beginning of the Sermon on the Mount . . . and how you can apply them to achieve a fuller, richer Christian life. It will be sent in a plain wrapper—and nobody will call on you. Write today for your free copy. Ask for Pamphlet No. KC-29.

4 tobacco insects due for control

Four major insect pests of tobacco need control measures now says the Kentucky Experiment Station entomology department.

They are budworms, hornworms, aphids and flea-beetles. Some may not have appeared all over the state as yet, says Richard Thurston, entomologist, but they are "on their way".

The control measures:

BUDWORMS: These greenish caterpillars develop about two to three weeks after transplanting operations are over. They are found in the developing buds of young plants. Hit them with one of three materials TDE, DDT or Endrin, used as a spray or dust. TDE and DDT are used at the rate of one pound actual material per acre; Endrin at three-tenths of one pound actual material per acre. Care must be taken in application so that a too-heavy concentration of material isn't put directly into the buds, Thurston says; they could—particularly the emulsion concentrates—cause deformed leaves. Best way to apply the materials is to hold applicators about 15 inches above the plant, and spray directly downward.

HORNWORMS: These large worms, marked by a prominent horn, can be controlled with TDE or ENDRIN. Use TDE at the rate of a pound of actual material per acre, endrin at two-tenths of a pound actual per acre, as a spray or dust.

APHIDS: Parathion or Malathion are used against these tiny, green sucking insects which appear mostly underneath leaves, or around the top leaves of tobacco plants. Use Parathion dust (1 percent strength) at 20 to 30 pounds an acre and take extreme care in handling this dust, as it is poisonous to humans, etc. Use Malathion dust (4 to 5 percent strength) at 20 to 30 pounds per acre. If a Malathion spray is used, use one pound actual material per acre. Dusts are believed more effective than sprays for control of aphids.

FLEA-BEETLES: These black or brownish "jumping" insects are controlled by Endrin (two-tenths of a pound actual per acre and TDE or DDT, each 1 pound actual per acre.

Farm facts

JULY—1958

Farm Safety. The two most dangerous places in America today are the highways and the farms of the nation. The farm is doubly dangerous because it combines all the hazards of the modern home and its electrical gadgets with those of fast moving farm machinery. Add to these the dangers of unsupervised swiming, wider uses of fire arms, dangers of isolated fires and injuries resulting from handling livestock and you find a larger percent of injuries and deaths by accident on the farm than in any segment of the American population.

Farm equipment is more dangerous than industrial machinery because much of that used on the farm—such as combines, corn harvesters and balers—is very seasonal. It is used only a few days each year, thus giving the operator little opportunity to develop a technique, or safe pattern of movement. Tractors on our hilly Kentucky farms are particularly dangerous, too.

But probably the most important factor in the dangers on the farm is the natural carelessness of many people. Long and irregular hours of work are not conducive in orderly checkups of danger points, and farm people are prone to overlook little things that endanger life and limb. A broken board in the barn floor, rotten steps, rubbish left idly around are all booby traps of danger.

The period, July 20-26, has been proclaimed FARM SAFETY WEEK. It will probably pass by as another one of "those weeks" but Kentucky farm people could save many an accident, much money and probably some lives if they would take a little time that week and methodically check those things on the farm and in the home that might cause accidents and then go about correcting them. It would be a project well worthwhile.

Quality and nutritive value are not affected by the size of the egg nor the color of the shell. Weight for weight, small eggs are equal to that of large eggs of the same quality.

The egg yolk is a good source of vitamin A, which helps to keep the membranes of the body in healthy condition and ward off respiratory infections.
