Good questions

Why do labor leaders object to making secret ballots in union elections mandatory?

Why do they object to penalties for failing to file statements of union finances?

In a "free" country how can they have the power to deny men the right to work unless they join and pay their organization for the privilege?

In a land where equal justice for all is supposed to prevail how do they have immunity from "anti-trust" laws that apply to all other organizations that combine to control or restrict production to gain their ends?

More and more Americans are beginning to wonder whether the terms "democracy" and "freedom of the individual" are empty phrases in the United States.

Have workers in businesses become the pawns of labor organizations so powerful and wealthy that they are above and outside the laws that apply to all others?

These are good questions.

Promise the moon

"The investor's best friend and worst enemy" is one and the same thing—the ubiquitous telephone. That is the gist of a highly informative little booklet which has just been issued by the member firms of the New York Stock Exchange. And the information it contains is of very real importance in this age in which many millions of people, most of them with moderate incomes, own shares in our corporations, and the number is steadily increasing.

The telephone, as the booklet points out, is a marvelous instrument and of special value to the investor. If you have a connection with a reputable broker you can buy or sell securities by just making a call. The financial settlement is made later.

However, the booklet goes on, "most of the thieves who foist phony stock off on the public also use the telephone . . . They do it by phone because they can hardly do it in person." Their offices are of the hole-in-the-wall variety. They frequently operate "boiler rooms" where high-powered confidence men keep the phone lines hot fleecing the unwary. They can, legally, call themselves brokers. And the fact that their address may be on a street, such as Wall Street, which is famous for financial institutions, is no protection—anyone can rent space anywhere.

The technique used by these sharpers is pretty well standardized. They promise the moon. They start the victim out in a small way, and then gradually build up the stakes until, as often happens, he is committed to the absolute limit. The booklet tells of the not unusual case of a prosperous retired businessman who put $250 into uranium stocks on the advice of a telephone salesman—and, responding to periodic urging, went deeper and deeper until he wound up flat broke.

How can you identify these spy artists? The booklet goes into that, with a series of questions and answers. Here they are:

Is he in a hurry? The crooks always are—you're urged to buy fast before the price goes up. The legitimate broker doesn't rush you.

Does he plug one certain stock? The crook always does. The legitimate broker will recommend stocks, if you want him to, but he doesn't high-pressure you into buying any particular issue.

Does he promise you a profit? The crook will promise you anything—he lives on the get-rich-quick instinct almost all of us possess to some degree. The legitimate broker makes no rash promises. He will give you the benefit of his professional opinion, but he can't and won't guarantee that any given stock is due to increase in value.

Can you check on his reputation? The crook has no references at all, except, possibly, some forged ones that won't stand checking. The legitimate broker will stand up under any business investigation you care to make. Often he is a member firm of the New York Stock Exchange, which prescribes and enforces a rigid code of financial responsibility.

At the end, the booklet offers this proven advice: ". . . to invest intelligently . . . go to a reputable broker, and tell him what your investment objectives are . . . He offers you the most thoughtful guidance he can . . . based on facts, plus his judgment."

Receipts light, but market active; council passes 10 mph speed limit

Thursday, March 10, 1938

Five birthday candles will gleam at CCC Camp Carlisle on April 5, 1938, and the camp will pause momentarily from its work of demonstrating soil conservation methods.

A thief or thieves who broke into the Moorefield Mercantile Company store at Moorefield last Friday night took approximately $45 from the cash drawer.

Receipts were light on the local livestock market but the market was active at the weekly sales held Tuesday.

Farmers throughout the County have started preparations for their tobacco seed beds. Seed dealers report heavy sales, indicating a large crop this year.

Rev. W. E. Arnold, retired Methodist minister, died Wednesday morning at Louisville, following a long illness.

Homer Jackson, about 45, former resident of Carlisle was killed instantly last Friday when he fell from a railroad trestle at Louisville.

Residents of the Licking river sections of the County were uneasy for two days last week because of high water. However, no homes were flooded.

The contractors have started work on the construction of the new school building at Headquarters consolidated school.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Welborn H. Secrest of Jacksonville, Fla., a son on Feb. 25.—To Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Durham, a son on March 4th.

Thursday, March 7, 1918

H. C. Metcalfe sells his interest in the Golden Rule Grocery to his partner, Joe Walden.

Local draft board completes physical examination of all men registered in Nicholas County.

Council passes ordinance fixing speed limit for automobiles in Carlisle at 10 miles per hour.

D. B. Barnett sells residence on hill overlooking Carlisle to O. L. Harrison for $4,250. Mr. Harrison also buys 13 acres adjoining from Mrs. N. P. Scott for $2,500.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Keith Ockerman, of the County, on the 4th, a son.—To Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Wilson, of the County, on Feb. 22, a daughter.

MARRIED—Miss Virgie Cox and Avery Shroud, both of the County, on the 6th.

From The Canton Independent-Sentinel, Canton, Pa.: Interesting is the announcement that John D Hertz, who rose from a penniless immigrant Hungarian boy to an American millionaire, is allocating most of his fortune, which may run in to "many millions of dollars" to a scholarship fund for training young men and women as mechanical and electrical engineers

Mr Hertz, who is now 78 years old and a partner in Lehman Brothers, investment bankers, became disturbed by newspaper reports that the Russians "are turning out 100 per cent more engineers than we are." To offset Soviet advances in training engineers, he has made immediately available enough money to subsidize more than 100 students a year. The trustees of the fund, which will be called "The John K and John D Hertz Engineering Scholarship Fund," will have full discretion in the administration of the money

However, Mr. Hertz has made the following stipulations:

1 There must be no discrimination in giving aid with regard to race, religion or sex.

2 All those receiving aid must take a course in American history.

3 They must pledge themselves to serve the United States on request of the Government in time of national emergency.

In explaining the aims of the fund, Mr. Hertz said: "I simply want to contribute in the interest of defense the fortune the United States has allowed me to accumulate." And, later, he said he was interested in "the poor boy or girl who really wants an education but can't get it."

From the Catskill Mountain star, Saugerties, N. Y.: The great American cities are booming in population. But millions of people still prefer the smaller towns, the grass-roots feel and atmosphere, the way of life that goes with the countryside

Recently an employment agency ran a three-line ad in the New York Times offering jobs on country weekly newspapers. From that single, tiny notice more than 60 replies were received. This caused the American Press to say that there may be many newspapermen who have gone to the cities to seek their fortunes and, after a few frustrating months or years, long to return to the country . . .".

When the recent zero weather came, an elderly man and wife were caught without water. A very considerate young man heard of the situation and did something about it. Going to Neal's Square Deal he borrowed a five-gallon lard can. Such acts of brotherly love should be shouted from the housetops, but it is astonishing how some folks do not want one hand to know what the other one does. SOME folks look for the first bud on the tree, for an early robin, or scan the skies for the V-lined flight of honkers returning to their home in the northlands Such are signs that spring is not too far away But just as sure a sign—and just as welcome—is the annual arrival of fishing tackle catalogs

Nowadays, fishing tackle catalogs are more than just "wish books." Many of them are filled with information that earns for them a place in every ardent angler's tackle box pertinent data on fish and fishing, world records, catches, etc.

It is often surprising that veteran anglers will not be quite sure whether the bass on their string is largemouth, smallmouth, or Kentucky spotted. Many don't care, they fish for fun or for meat. Fishing is for fun, it's true, but like any other endeavor, it offers fascinating rewards for extra effort. Being able to correctly identify related species of fish adds much fun to the sport

This year Holdom's offers a 76-page compendium which covers just about every aspect of the fishing scene, highlighted by a special section which clearly illustrates America's 32 most popular sport fishes, listing both common and scientific names, characteristics, habitat, world records, preference in natural foods and artificial lures, etc. Information on baits for setting campfire are there.

Spring will come in its own good time, it won't be rushed. But the appearance of fishing catalogs offers the promise that won't be long and as well give the enthusiast something to do with his time in the meanwhile

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

By Gil Kingsbury

ABOUT GOVERNORS:

The recent departure of Harold Stassen from the President's official family was no surprise. He's gunna run for Governor of Pennsylvania. And some years ago he was Governor of Minnesota.

All of which brings up the story of Kentucky's Preston Leslie. He was Governor of the Commonwealth from 1871 to 1875. And after that he was Governor of the Montana Territory from 1887 to 1889.

Only famous old Sam Houston, Governor of Tennessee and Texas, can match the Leslie record.

STREAM POLLUTION:

Kentucky is not doing too bad on stream pollution control. We rank in the middle group on such projects.

Our state has 17 such projects approved by Uncle Sam, totting about 9 million dollars. As you might expect, Texas is at the top with no less than 41 projects costing more than 13 million.

ABOUT CHERRY BLOSSOMS:

Hundreds of Kentucky school children come to Washington during the Cherry Blossom festival. This year, we report, the blossoms are due to sprout during the last week in March You can make your plans accordingly.

Incidentally, that plan to remodel the front of the Capitol is running into opposition Architects want to keep the building just as it is So do a lot of other organizations But lawmakers need more room and the fight—a long one—goes on

AND ABOUT BARKLEY:

The Veep—Alben Barkley—is gone but stories linger on Congressman Brooks Hays of Arkansas is billed as another storyteller equal to the famous Kentuckian

Brooks Hays tells this story how one instructor taught a student to become a public speaker.

The instructor took a leaf out of the story of Demosthenes, who practiced his speeches with pebbles in his mouth. At the beginning of the course each student was given a mouthful of marbles Every day the instructor reduced the number by one marble. The student became a public speaker when he had lost all his marbles.

Answer to Puzzle No. 488

SALE ENDS MARCH 15

THURSDAY, MARCH 6

Read Galatians 6:1-10.

Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. (Galatians 6:7.)

Is there for sin a penalty? God's forgiveness does not cover? Is there for sin a consequence God does not separate from us?

A mother warned her child not to climb trees, lest he be punished. Ignoring the command, he climbed a tree. A limb broke and he fell. The result? A broken arm! Through painful sobs, he begged his mother to forgive him. Gladly his mother forgave him. But it did not punish him. But she could not mend the broken arm. He had to bear the consequence of his disobedience.

God applies to us the same law of consequence for sin. When, with a penitent heart, we seek God's forgiveness. He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. But there is still the natural consequence of sin for which we have no deliverance. This little lesson serves us to consider the cost of sin! A ruined life for a few moments of sin is a tremendous price to pay!

PRAYER

Our Father, enable me to sow seeds that will not bring to me a harvest of regret, anguish and sorrow. Teach me to sow seeds of love and mercy, so that I may reap an abundant harvest to the honor and glory of Thy name; through Christ, the Saviour of the world. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

A ruined life is a tremendous price to pay for a few moments of sin.

C.H.S. News

by Judy Galbraith

Hello everyone again this week.

The six weeks has ended now, so tests are over for awhile. Just think only twelve more weeks of school. Doesn't time fly?

The Jrs and Srs had their Chili Supper Friday night. It was very successful. We hope everyone enjoyed himself and had an eight to eat.

The Honor Society had a program in chapel Thursday morning. New members were admitted. Congratulations, this is a real honor, and it takes hard work to achieve this standing.

Well the tournaments have started now. Everyone is excited and just a little worried about how the games will turn out. Carlisle plays Myers Fri. at 7:30 H.S. plays Paris Good Luck.

Also Thursday morning Kate Lou House received a twenty-five dollar Savings Bond for winning the Soil Conservation Essay Contest in this district. Ronnie Wilson won $15 for 2nd place and Ruth Shrout, $2.00 for 6th place. Congratulations.

The F.H.A. Sok-Hop was held Saturday night at the Armory. Dancing contests were held and everyone seemed to be having a good time.

That's it for now, see you next week.
