New Business Opportunity Open

By Herndon J. Evans, editor Lexington Herald

Now that the Supreme Court has held that bookmakers may deduct the ordinary and necessary expenses of operating their business, it might be expected that the tax burden on new operators will be less. At the same time the court held that those paid by bookmakers for advertising and promotion are not deductible as business expenses.

The bookmaker's ruling, based on regulations of the Internal Revenue Service, is just one of many strange rules promulgated by the federal government which have no basis in common sense. It is a quest for a few extra dollars that the federal government is making a gambler by issuing these rules.

It is many of these rules which are the cause of the bookmaker's loss. In many of these rules which are the cause of the bookmaker's loss. In many of these rules which are the cause of the bookmaker's loss.
