KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

By Gil Kingsbury

TENSION MOUNTS:

If Kentucky's former Senator Earle C. Clements is seated on the edge of his chair these days there is good reason.

The former Kentucky governor is now the Director of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee. And he has been working with Democratic candidates across the nation in preparation for the November election. Tension is mounting.

SURVEYS SHOW:

According to surveys, the Democrats are supposed to pick up a goodly number of Senate seats. Already one—Muskie of Maine—is in the bag. But what happens in the next few days will determine the success or failure of the Democrats' mission.

The other day, the Kentuckian spoke to a group of Democratic women workers and predicted a gain of ten seats. Two will come from Alaska, once that territory joins the Union. He also sees a double victory in West Virginia.

Kentucky women played a big part in the meeting here. Mrs. Tyler Abell, the Clements' daughter, introduced her father. In the audience were Mrs. Fred Vinson and Mrs. Alben Barkley.

One surprise at the meeting was the Clements' observation on Vermont. A Democratic victory up there, he said, would not be too surprising.

WHAT IS NEXT?

If the former senator comes through with the sweep that many predict, he'll be stronger than ever in national party circles.

Many observers in Washington believe that he could become national chairman, although Clements, himself, has made no comment. Others say that come the presidential election, he'll be able to command plenty of attention and, perhaps, a cabinet post.

At any rate, there is good reason for tension in the office of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, Executive Director, Earle C. Clements.

A Little Yappin'

by Nellie Crump

Public Notice.

If you own a saw and ever expect to need it again you had better keep both eyes on it for awhile. Most of the boys and girls (and I dare say some grownups) are searching the house from cellar to attic and all outbuildings for them since listening to Mr. Moody Cunningham's inspiring saw selections at the Methodist revival which closed Sunday night. The hunt is widespread in and about town, even undermining the hula hoop craze.

—yap—

Successful Undertaking.

The continuous revival services which have been in progress in Carlisle will come to a close Sunday night at the Christian Church. Beginning around the first of October, services have been held nightly, each denomination commencing its special meeting a few nights before another closed. This type of revival effort, which is something new in this part of Kentucky, has been largely attended at all churches and very successful, it is said. The weather cooperated, too.

—yap—

Under His Wing.

This true incident might be the means of saving your child's life. Anyway, I was an eyewitness and it keeps bearing on my mind.

This little first grade girl was playing with a large paper carton on the corner by my home. She finally put it on for a hat. Coming to a puddle of water she stooped down to play as all children do. Nothing showing but her hands, she resembled an outsize bug. As she innocently played in the water a half-grown boy came whizzing along on a bicycle. Seeing what looked like an empty box in the road he did what all boys do when the urge to knock it to smithereens took possession of him. Throwing on full speed he pedaled with all the power in his skinny legs and was almost wrecked by the impact. (Remember he could not see the child under the box). Slowly he went on his way, while the little girl gave him a "dirty" look and began picking up the remains of her mud pies and wiped her hands on the tail of her dress. Badly crushed, the box lay on the side of the road. Neither boy or girl realized their narrow escape from death. Just suppose that bicycle had been a car! This story would have been on the front page of The Mercury instead of in this space. Truly, the guardian angel was patrolling the corner at that very hour.

Yaps—all . . .

TODAY'S meditation

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23

Read 1 Corinthians 10:9-13

God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it. (1 Corinthians 10:13.)

In different parts of the world, folk have the same trials. Let us not think, then, that we are singled out by fate as the bearers of trials uncommon to man. Any resentment will vanish if we remember that there is a fellowship of people carrying the same load as we do.

It is good to remember also that God is not a mere spectator of our trials. We have the rich assurance that God is our reliable Friend. A great missionary spent seven long years on the field before winning a single convert. During that time his wife died. With his own hands he dug the grave and laid her body in it. He himself read the funeral service. Later he wrote, "I was not alone, for Jesus Christ was there."

In our trials God makes a way out, so that we may be able to bear them. Jesus Christ is with us in all our trials. Therefore we can lift up our hearts.

PRAYER: O Lord, our reliable Friend, help us this day to face life gallantly. In the sure knowledge that Thou will sustain us in even the bitterest trial, we put our trust in Thee; through Jesus Christ our Lord Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

God will never leave me or forsake me.

"Where your Dollar Goes Farther"

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

By C. D. Smith

An Education Is Worth Some Effort

"I am in the 10th grader same as last year's in high school and don't think I will ever be able to finish," writes a Southern teenager, who adds: "I want to quit school and go to work but my parents won't let me. Don't you think I would be better off working, if the type of work I do doesn't take much education?"

You might be satisfied with yourself for a time if you left school without getting your diploma. But sometime, and most likely before very long, you would regret the fact that you did not complete your high school education.

There are, of course, many successful men in American business who never completed high school. In many cases, public education was not available to them. The education they were able to give themselves and the knowledge they gained through reading books, newspapers and periodicals—coupled with a strong inner drive for success—led these men to achievements.

You may not need a high school education for the job you have in mind. But, there is a way of changing things. Someday the job may not be there and you'll have to look elsewhere. Other opportunities that appeal to you may come along. And the fact that you never completed your high school education will always stand as a mark against you.

You can finish high school if you put forth the effort. Tell yourself that your chosen occupation, whatever it may be, calls for a high school diploma—then work for that diploma just as you would work for that job.

If you have a serious problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, write to Mr. Smith in care of this newspaper. ENCLOSE A STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE FOR A PERSONAL REPLY. ADDRESS: C. D. SMITH, REPORT, ART.
