The Fuel Administration called upon the public in states east of the Mississippi River to cease the using of all classes of automobiles, with a few exceptions, such as motorboats and motorcycles on Sunday until further notice as a gasoline conservation measure.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allison on August 24th.—To Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Barlow, on August 25th, a daughter.—To Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Smith, a son on August 26th.

DIED—Mrs. William D. Collins at her home in Carlisle on August 27th.—Miss Frankie Blair at the home of her nephew, John M. Brown, on Saturday evening. She was 82 years of age.—Mrs. Mollie Smith King, at her home last Thursday afternoon.

A population of 20,000 persons and $10,000,000 assessed property valuation is called the minimum for efficient operation of local government. Less than half Kentucky's counties meet either one of the criteria.

A Little Yappin'

Going Places to See Things.

Donning my newest dress and ridiculous hat I lit out for Covington last Tuesday morning on the Greyhound bus. The weather was all that could be hoped for. It was my first experience with air-conditioned traveling and it is simply "out of this world." Truly, the world grows "weaker and wiser"—well, wiser, anyway. I did my level best to keep up with the younger generation but came Friday I was worn to a frazzle, gave up and left for Carlisle still wondering where all the city people were going in such a hurry.

She Baked a Cake.

On Wednesday night while visiting in Covington, my aunt, myself and one of my old schoolmates now living there were invited to my cousin Lelia's for dinner (you know, I sat about the time we have supper here). A homebaked jam cake was cooling on the kitchen table. A little later it went through the caromeling process and as my cousin added a little more here and a little more there she said to me that more to herself "This is Mrs. Walter Hazelrigg's recipe and I have never used it before, but the clipping that came with it from Carlisle said it was good." That statement was so right!

He Died for you.

At the Methodist Bible School back in early June there was a small free-will offering from the children each day with the hope there would be enough money to buy an electric Cross for the pulpit. I do not know what the offering was nor what the Cross cost, but there it was Sunday morning. At the close of Sunday School six-year-old Bill Gaunce, son of Harvey and Marie, threw the switch that cast a soft glow from the beautiful piece of workmanship high on the pipe organ back of the choir and preacher's chair. Such is the love instilled in the hearts of little Sunday School children.

Beauty to the Artist Eye.

The things we are so accustomed to we take little interest in until something happens and someone comes along seeing the beauty that calls us back from the everyday hurried humdrum of "making the grade."

Miss Katherine King of Cincinnati, daughter of the late Walter King of Carlisle, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. L. S. Robbins, here now and has seen beauty. She spends a large part of each day sitting at the dust street, her deft fingers painting our Main street from the Deposit Bank to Cole's Corner against a background of hill and sky.

Miss King is an artist of note, maintaining her own studio in Cincinnati. She has shown several paintings in the National Artists' Exhibition and now has a number on display in various Cincinnati buildings.

Surgery Improves Condition.

The many friends here of Mrs. Ira Rankin (Ethelene) Mt. Olivet (who visits me) are so glad to hear that she is getting along favorably following serious surgery at the hospital at St. Joseph's hospital in Lexington two weeks ago. She has returned home.

Something Worth Seeing.

I would not attempt to name the light we saw in the sky the night my cousins took me a drive over a large part of Covington—but we did see something! The Moonlight was wonderful as we dodged other cars on a high ridge road and we saw another "moon"—not as large or beautiful. It seemed about the size of a flour barrel and was rocking slowly but surely rickety-split. I betcha! There were several planes low with bright colored lights, flying high, then dipping low with the greatest of ease like the daring young man on his flying trapeze." Methinks I saw the man in the moon smiling at the swan-dinning view

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

By Cal Kingsbury

TOBACCO HISTORY:

Senator John Sherman Cooper made a speech recently on tobacco and world trade. He made one observation which has escaped many. The first tobacco was shipped abroad more than 350 years ago, from the Jamestown colony to England.

In brief, the tobacco export trade is, perhaps, the oldest export business in the nation's history.

A LOT OF FAMILIES.

Today some 800,000 rural families depend upon tobacco for a living and many of them are, of course, Kentuckians.

Add to that figure the people who make the paper cartons, the tin foil, and other items, directly or indirectly connected with tobacco, and you get many, many more citizens who depend on Uncle Sam's cash crop.

UNCLE SAM, TOO:

In calculating the importance of tobacco, we must not forget Uncle Sam and the various state governments. They, too depend on tobacco for money.

Latest figures show that government, state and federal collects about 2½ billion dollars each year, a healthy slice to run the schools, welfare programs, highways, and the military.

GOES ABROAD:

Nine per cent of the total tobacco crop is exported. About one pound in every three goes across the ocean for sale to foreigners.

Last year, for example, some 500 million pounds were shipped abroad. Experts say it was a big year. Around 700 million.

Just the same, there is a better year we are not getting the new foreign market we deserve now. Johnnie Jackson. Cor. The shortage of dollars the in- Isle, Mrs. J. T. Barton. TODAY'S meditation

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4

Read Psalm 37:1-7

One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life. (Psalm 27:4)

At first sight this seems a strange request, even to a devout Christian. What does this verse of Scripture mean? Does it mean that the temple is a kind of hotel where we can live all the time? Or is it the cry of a tired man who longs for a cloistered life?

Neither the psalmist is thinking of the Temple in Jerusalem as the symbol of the highest things in life. He is expressing the desire that all he has learned from worship in the Temple may be retained in the ordinary days of living.

It is as though he had a picture in his mind of oriental hospitality, in which the sheik is the friend of the traveler, giving him refreshment after the day's journey and rest before resuming his journey. That is how he thinks of the Temple.

Our Sunday worship should be able to stand the test of Monday morning.

PRAYER: O God, our Father in heaven, teach us to worship Thee in such a way that it may be a means of strength and blessing in all we undertake. May the calm and peace of Thy house be present with us this day in whatever we may do and wherever we may go. In the Master's name. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

May we take the love of our Lord out into the world.

From The Tallassee Tribune, "Tallassee, Alabama." Are either Mike Dizzy Dean or you do not, that's for sure.

We happen to like the big guy and were glad to hear his announce that he had signed a ten year contract to continue televising Saturday and Sunday baseball games of the week.

Although no announcement was made, we presume that Buddy Blattner will continue on as Dean's partner. They go together like ham and eggs and we are not going to get this any controversy about who's the ham.

Dizz is good for those perforating ulcers. When he excitedly announces that "he shall like Uncle Dizzy when, boy, they liked to throw him out," you can't get your mind on Khrushchev, Nasser or even Goddess.

The old Hall of Famer's warbling of "Wahoo Cannonball" is about as far removed from the ball diamond as anything could be. But you know, he makes it sound good.

Dean is at his best (or worst) in pronouncing names of the ball players. You can hardly believe it when you hear him call Brooklyn's Roseboro "Rosebury." And when he gets hold of our boy Costello or Colavito. It's love but the goes.

Dizz was an old pro on the 4-11 And he is now as an announcer

From The Independent, Fuquay Springs, N. C.: There is a widespread notion that the only proper way to go fishing is to pile a lot of expensive gear into the car, drive a long way through heavy morning traffic consisting largely of other fishermen bent on the same mission, and spend the day at worse and trying for the big ones. Some devotees go equipped as though for a venture into outer space—and the distance they travel is comparable.

This is one way to go fishing, all right. But it's a troublesome way; it's a necessary way. Fishing ought to be neither troublesome nor wearisome. Undertaken sensibly, fishing can be a pleasant recreation for both mind and body.

The trick is to forget your consuming yen to haul in the lunkers that swim in waters far away. You go to some nearby spot and drop in a line, and then let nature's beautiful quiet seep into your soul. Then takes time, but it will happen. Maybe you catch a few fish; maybe you don't. No matter. By day's end, fish or no fish, you've landed that most elusive catch of all, the benign of being at peace with all the world.

Fun Ends When Foolishness Begins

"My best pal," writes a teenager, "is a practical joker. Since we were in grade school I went along with his jokes and thought everything he did was the funniest ever. Now, I think some of the things he does are embarrassing rather than funny, and I don't enjoy being with him as much as I used to. Do practical jokers ever grow out of it?"

No particular age group can list complete claim to all of the practical jokers. Some, it seems, are born that way and manage to get through life without ever changing.

There's a little bit of devilment in all of us. It's true. And, when we reach the point where we can no longer laugh at the antics of others — or at some of the things that happen to ourselves, we need to back track and attempt to discover exactly where we lost our sense of humor.

Practical jokers, if they are just jokes, and not actions that cause embarrassment or inconvenience to others, can add a bit of spice to the humdrum of day-to-day living. Too often, however, these poor souls overdo the thrust of the joke and it's usually someone with a temperament and personality that is no joking matter. Small boys sometimes think it funny to tie a string of cans to a lonesome dog's tail—but no one ever heard a member of the canine family express the opinion that there was anything funny about it.

A few teenagers think they must have something "going" all the time. So, when things become dull they put their talents to work trying to "stir" things up. If the "stirring" is done in the interest of good, clean fun, then all is well. But, a practical joke that causes embarrassment or inconvenience to anyone isn't practical at all. And when someone helps a "pal" pull the wrong kind of a stunt, he isn't being a "friend" at all. He's only a partner in an enterprise he wouldn't think of undertaking by himself.

Yes, some teenage practical jokers do grow out of it. Others, regrettably, never seem to grow up.

If the boss is a practical joker, he can be a real problem. Some bosses are, but most of them are not. Most of them are pretty nice people to work for. Most of them are pretty nice people to work for.

THE BOLD PROPOSAL

By Allen Wishert

BERNICE MANNING was not a girl to bother presentiments, yet upon opening the door to the inner office that particular morning, a premonition enveloped her. She knew she was on the verge of encountering an unforseen event. Glancing over the interior she found all in order. Everything was in it's proper place, even unto her employer, Mr. Edmond Rutherford, Sr. He was seated, majestically behind his ponderous desk, going over and separating letters of small documents as was his usual established custom. Still, the "Something" dominated, whether it bode good or evil Bernice was unable to determine.

Removing her coat, she sat at the typewriter, her desk was piled high with copy. Nothing seemed to be left undone, only the morning's mail, which she knew would herself time for a coffee-break.

Still, there was "Something," whatever it was, bearing down with extreme pressure at the moments passed.

Then, the typewriter arose she raised her eyes, and they met Mr. Rutherford's, He was staring at her. His glass was firm, he was beginning to extract a conviction, Bernice wondered;

"Now, what
