Mrs. Clay elected KSFSA secretary

Over 400 school lunch personnel in Kentucky attended the third annual convention of the Kentucky School Food Service Association held in Louisville at which Mrs. Elizabeth R. Clay, local school lunch director was elected secretary. The meeting at the Kentucky Hotel was attended by 400 delegates from Nicholas County.

Dr. John N. Perryman, Executive Secretary American School Food Service Association gave a talk on "The ALSO of School Lunch." With over 60 thousand lunch rooms in America the school lunch personnel plays an important role in the education of children The lunch room is not looked upon as a "filling station." The ALSO means Architects of anatomy, leaders of learning, sources of survival, and organizers of opportunity.

Dr. Perryman closed his talk with this simple formula for success: "Fail in love with something to fill your heart."

A movie, "Modern Sandwich Methods for the School Lunchroom" was presented by the American Institute of Baking.

Following luncheon in the Terrace Room of the Kentucky a "Fashion Show of Uniforms" was given by lunch room workers. Attractive aprons added color to the really beautiful white cotton, nylon, or dacron uniforms worn.

Mr. A. L. Larimore, President, Kentucky Retail Grocers, gave a talk on "Food Trends." After drawing for a large number of door prizes donated by business firms in Louisville the convention adjourned.

New rule on wheat history

A farmer who has wheat planted in excess of his 1959 acreage allotment may dispose of the extra acres up until June 1, 1959, and it probably will increase the wheat allotment in the future if he does so, according to a reminder from H. S. Vice of the Nicholas County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

A major factor in determining farm wheat allotments is the history of wheat grown previously on the farm. The farmer who complies with his allotment gets "history" credit not only for the allotment planted but also for his "excused" acres, which is the acreage held out of wheat under the allotment program. On the other hand, under a new law effective this year, the farmer who produces excess wheat will usually receive history credit only for the allotment in the past, the overproduction received his total wheat acreage as history.

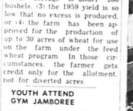
The farmer who produces excess wheat in 1959 may deliver the excess to the Secretary of Agriculture or store it —on the farm under bond or in a commercial warehouse. In that way he avoids marketing quota penalties He also gets history credit for his allotment plus diverted acres just as though he had complied with his allotment. However, the credit for diverted acres applies in case the stored wheat is sold or used and the producer becomes liable for marketing quota penalties

There is another type of situation in which the producer exceeds his wheat allotment but produces no marketing excess This may occur on farms where (1) the total wheat acreage is 15 acres or less, (2) the normal production of the wheat acreage is under 200 bushels, (3) the 1959 yield is so low that no excess is produced, or (4) the farm has been approved for production of up to 30 acres of wheat for use or feed on the farm under the wheat program. In those circumstances, the farmer gets credit only for the allotment not for diverted acres

YOUTH ATTEND GYM JAMBOREE

Several members of the Carlisle Methodist Youth Fellowship and their leader Mrs. Sterling Blake attended a Gym Jamboree entitled "The Space Age" on the campus of Asbury College at Wilmore. Friday night Reverend and Mrs. Gwinn Bierley took the group. The jamboree was a selection of tumbles and dangerous acts on the trapeze. The participants were boys and girls on the tumbling team at Asbury.

Between acts clowns did tricks and stunts on the tumbling equipment.



Terracing, contouring saves money

Terracing fields to control erosion and cultivating on the contour are two ways to improve Kentucky farming says Hermit Mills Kentucky Extension Service agricultural engineer

Terraces are ridges of earth thrown up across the slope to check flow of water and slow washing rains. they do this by collecting runoff water and running it back and forth across the field in the terraces Contour cultivation is the practice of cultivating on the level A large amount of erosion—about half on properly contoured fields—can be prevented by such contouring

A contour is a mapping expression on a map they are wavy lines a contour line on a farm map would mark all the points on a hill which are the same distance above sea level Contouring helps farming because it puts cultivation work on the same level this saves time tractor fuel and makes turn-arounds easier County agents and SCS men have full information on how to terrace or contour the slopes on your farm

Want to know what a feed bark control system is? I thought I wanted to know until I read this definition released by General Electric's Computer department Now I just don't care Here is the definition

The feeding back of the information about the output to the input to allow the input to produce the desired output

Now would be a good time for the industry to conduct a survey to ascertain which toys sold at Christmas time actually were indestructible

THE STARS

by LYN CONNELLY

ONE of the greatest troupers in show business is part, saucy Mary Martin and she proved her showmanship once more on Easter Sunday when she put on two separate TV shows, one in the afternoon and one only four hours later

The gal leaves you gasping after a while. Fabulous is the only adjective to describe her, little enough though the word is

She certainly makes it easy on the people who represent her talent.

Within seconds she was a winsome nurse singing about her "Wonderful Guy" in the South Seas Islands; a precocious, delightful Peter Pan flying through the air to the Never Land; a lovely Chinese maiden doing "Valley High" from "Lute Song"; an ambitious Annie Oakley in buffalo-cloth cowgirl trappings itching to turn in her rifle for a man. She did old songs and new ones and somehow, without the least song at all through which hours with no guest stars, Mary didn't seem to be singing her part and each time you were sorry it ended.... There's a lesson to be learned by so-called stars who rely solely on guests to help carry a show.

PLATTER CHATTER

WARNER BROS.—Young company, but it's on the right beam turning out some great hi-fi albums . . . Like western, humm? THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

THURSDAY, APRIL 30
Read 1 Peter 4: 12-19

If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf. (1 Peter 4: 16.)

On a cold winter's day, St. Francis of Assisi and Brother Leo were walking together. For a time they traveled in silence. Then Francis began to talk about the nature of real joy. He said one does not find perfect joy by setting a good example, nor by doing miracles, nor by having great knowledge, nor by the ability to preach so that infidels become converted.

"If these things do not give perfect joy, where can it be found?" asked Brother Leo.

Francis answered that perhaps they might come to their next stopping place on a cold and stormy night and that the porter might refuse to let them in. He might accuse them of being good-for-nothing St. Francis says if they could bear his abuse with patience and not think badly of him, then they would experience perfect joy.

It is in willingly enduring all things for Jesus' sake which makes a Christian joyful. Nothing then defeats him, for he belongs to Christ.

PRAYER: O loving God, forgive us for our sins against Thee. Grant that the joy which was in the heart of Jesus may be in our hearts, too. Give us strength and courage necessary to endure all things for His sake. In His blessed name we pray. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

I will live today for Christ's sake and not for my own.
