missionary parents and was born in Lotumbe. It was there he preached his first sermon on his return as a missionary in 1955, having learned the native language as a boy.

In preparation for the Mission field Mr. Hobgood received his training at Transylvania and the College of the Bible in Lexington, Yale University, The Kennedy School of Missions at Hartford, Conn., and then spent one year in study in Brussels Belgium in order to meet the requirements of the Government, in the Belgian Congo.

In 1956 Mr. Hobgood was transferred to Coquithatville, as City Evangelist, an assignment which has a high priority among all the work of the Congo Missions. His work there includes the supervision of all the Christian Church work among a total of 30,000 Congolese who live in that area.

Church attendance has increased until they are now conducting five services each Sunday in the church auditorium, which seats 350, and five other services each Sunday nearby.

During his stay in Coquithatville, Mr. Hobgood taught English and Religious classes in the schools, preached regularly at the Provincial prison, served as counselor with the Girls Women's work and Scouts, parish callers, participated actively in the Boy Scout program, and other social groups, in addition to his regular work.

In 1957 he made a series of month long surveys up the Congo and Nigeria rivers in the Ubangi area which resulted in the reopening of a Mission Station and the assignment of a missionary couple there.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobgood, the former Betsy Bowers and their three daughters, the youngest being born in the Congo, are spending their furlough in Lexington, with their parents, Rev. Clay Hobgood and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bowers.

Rev. Hobgood is well known in Nicholas County having held the pastorate of the Moorefield Church while a student in Lexington, and have many friends here interested in their Missionary efforts in the Congo.

At the evening services Mr. and Mrs. Hobgood will show slides and speak of their work expanding work of the Christian Mission Stations in their area.

While in Carlisle they will be guests in the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Kingsolver and family.

Howard is a civilian employee of the Army, and currently is chief of the research and development section of the nucleonics facility at the Lexington Signal Depot.

He is to be joined in France by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Howard.

Howard graduated from Henry Clay high school, and earned his bachelor's degree in physics at the University of Kentucky in 1955.

$148,550 spent by Methodist

Some $148,550 was spent by Methodist churches of the Maysville District on construction and property during 1958, according to the Rev. Dr. Warner P. Davis, Maysville, district superintendent.

Two new education buildings and two new parsonages were constructed during the month period, Dr. Davis' report shows.

New construction projects amounted to $36,950 during the year, while $111,600 was spent for remodeling church property in the district.

Construction expenditures over the year amounted to a $43,000 increase over those of 1957.

Citizen group plans plunge into politics

LOUISVILLE — A nonpartisan organization of citizens dedicated to taking the state's child-welfare agencies out of politics has decided that the best way to fight politics is with politics.

The organization, Kentucky Citizens for Child Welfare, will not bring out any candidates of its own. Its plan is to ask all who announce for the legislature, as well as the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, to say how they stand on the issue—and then to publicize their replies.

"Actually, we believe, it will be good politics for a candidate to take a stand for freeing the state's child-welfare agencies from political domination. Surely a majority of the voters would prefer to have those agencies staffed by competent, trained workers selected by competitive examinations and protected by civil service, rather than by inexperienced persons awarded the jobs for having backed a winner." So says Mrs. Charles G. Tachau of Louisville, president of KCCW.

"Of course," she said, "there are candidates of a certain type who would much prefer not to have the subject brought up at all before the election, so they would not have to commit themselves. If they win, their races and become members of the General Assembly, we may expect to find them voting against taking the child-welfare agencies out of politics and taking politics out of the agencies—because that would reduce the number of state jobs open to apositmen. including their own friends and relatives.

"Obviously, the thing to do is to find out how they stand BEFORE the primary elections May 26. We propose to get the information they need in order to send to Frankfort representatives and senators committed to support what their constituents want.

"Naturally, if a candidate won't reply when we request him to take a stand one way or the other we can't force him to talk. However, we can tell the voters in his district that Candidate A let us say, has pledged to support the needed legislation while his opponent, Candidate B, has refused to say what he will do. The voters won't have any trouble forewing their conclusions from that."

KCCW will start at the top Candidates for the Democratic and Republican nominations for governor have been invited to attend a dinner-meeting at 6:30 p.m. (CST) Friday, January 23, at the Kentucky Hotel in Louisville. Each candidate will be given 10 minutes to state his position.

Local man involved in fatal crash

John R. Lewis, 40, salesman for a soft drink concern at Huntington, W. Va., died Saturday afternoon of injuries received earlier in the day in a highway accident.

West Virginia Police Lt. Charles Goodpaster said Lewis and a truck driver driven by Ermin S. Fuller of Carlisle, Ky., collided at an intersection. No charge was filed immediately.

Fuller's truck contained 1,600 gallons of milk, but none was spilled.

Both Fuller and Lewis told police they had the green light of a traffic signal at the intersection.

HUNTERS ARRESTED

Deputy Sheriff William Dollens arrested three persons Saturday afternoon for hunting on the farm of Hinton Caswell without permission. They were Jirome Fries, Allie Schultz and James Mitchell, all of near Covington.

Vatican with 1,000 Citizens is world's smallest state

The death of a Pope draws the regard of peoples everywhere to a tiny sovereign state that is hardly bigger than a large city park.

Even to Romans, Vatican City's 1087 acres are foreign soil. They are surrounded on all sides by a wall and are sacred to half a billion Roman Catholics throughout the world.

Inside the Vatican walls are St. Peter's Basilica, the largest church on earth, and a cluster of palaces, chapels, museums, galleries, apartments, courtyards, barracks, passageways, neat lawns, and secluded gardens. The National Geographic Society says:

Where Pope Is Chosen

The Vatican's Sistine Chapel is one of the wonders of all time and may well be man's greatest single-handed work of art. The high ceiling and altar wall are covered with Michelangelo frescoes showing the world's most famous man's Fall; man's hope, an the Last Judgment.

It is in that chapel that the College of Cardinals meets when a new Pope must be elected. Through a flue for the sign of agreement—thin white smoke—puffing skyward as the ballots are burned.

About 1,000 men and women live inside the Vatican. They have their own flag, currency, and postage stamps, their own shops, small industries, a daily newspaper that is carefully read by newsmen of many nationalities, a powerful radio station, and a railroad. They are exempt from Italian laws.

There is no income tax.

Most Vatican citizens are not of the cloth. They are Swiss guardsmen, papal gendarmerie, firemen, gardeners, and caretakers. The famed Sampietrini — "little men of St. Peter's" — scramble about the dome, and swing in bosun's chairs down the basilica to keep it in repair.

Many Romans enter the Vatican through the Gate of Santa Anna each day, punch a time clock, and report to their jobs as bank clerks, engineers, and so on. The bank incidentally, is ultramodern.

Outwardly placid, the Vatican is a busy world. Laymen in a dozen shops restore crumbling documents, books, and statuary. Nuns repair priceless old tapestries. In mosaic studios artisans painstakingly work on masterpieces of religious works. The printing shop produces books in Coptic, Syriac, and any number of other uncommon languages.

Center of Culture

The Vatican is a magnet for scholars, regardless of creed, as it seeks to perpetuate things scholarly, scientific, and artistic, as well as spiritual. The Papal Palace contains a treasure house of man's great works of art.

The Library has the world's greatest collection of manuscripts and incunabula. It has been said that if an unimaginable catastrophe should destroy all other museums in the world, the Vatican's five museums could reproduce esthetic culture, pagan and Christian.

The basilica is the second church erected in Peter's memory on Vatican Hill—a place of wondering (vaticinatia) in pagan days. The present structure rose bit by bit, 1506-1626. The resources of the papacy and the genius of such masters as Michelangelo and Raphael went into its creation. The nave flanked by soaring pillars, monuments, altars, and chapels, stretches for an eighth of a mile.

St. Peter's dominates Rome as well as Vatican City. The sun's first rays gild the cross above the 435-foot dome, steal across the vast Renaissance facade, and spread over the great stone piazza set with Piazza San Pietro Bernini colonnades extend like welcoming arms. Within the oval square, which can accommodate 100,000 persons

Local UK student on '240' committee

Joseph Houston Conley, University of Kentucky student from Carlisle, has been selected to represent Nicholas County on the U.K. Committee of 240, a leadership and information group composed of students from all over the state.

The organization is designed to present information on UK. especially to high school students. It is made up of students who have demonstrated leadership ability during their stay on campus.

In each county, the student members of the committee have been instructed to prepare and present information on the University to high school students interested in attending UK.

Chief function of the committee will be to provide general information and answer the questions of high school seniors interested in attending the University. High school principals and senior class sponsors who have students interested in UK may invite the representatives to appear at their school.

Conley, a son of J. F. Conley, is a senior at the University majoring in commerce.

FFA to be subjects of Rotary program

Foster Pumphrey, vocational agriculture teacher at Nicholas County high school will conduct the Rotary program tonight at 6:30 o'clock, Masonic Hall. His subject will be Future Farmers of America.

Officers of the FFA will be guests of the Rotary club.

Pallbearers will be, Ray Flora, Cecil Smart, Sam Fee, Jr., Robert Schmitt, Austin Lyons and Walter Crawford.

The body is at the Mathers-Shearer funeral home.

Corn added to a grass legume silage at ensiling time does not lessen its feeding value, says Illinois researchers.

Palmer named ag chairman for bank group

As County Agricultural Chairman Mr. Palmer will be the official representative of the Kentucky Bankers Association in activities designed to increase farm income and improve the welfare of rural communities. Such activities include the encouragement of new and improved farm practices, the support of fourth leadership training in 4-H Clubs and FFA Chapters, and cooperation with farm leaders and agencies in holding educational tours, field days and achievement meetings.

Besides engaging in many locally sponsored farm activities the county agricultural chairman will be coordinating and adapting the program of the State Bankers Association to the needs and conditions in their counties. At a recent meeting of the state Agricultural Chairmen of Nicholas agreed to feature Conservation as their major farm activity for 1959. They adopted the phrase, "Conservation is Everybody's Business" as the theme of the year.

The Kentucky Bankers Association has gained the unique recognition of having been awarded for nineteen consecutive years, the American Bankers Association's "Agricultural Award" for their superior program in the field of Agriculture.
