CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Mankind's need for spiritual salvation is clearly thought and phasized in Christian Science churches Sunday in the Lesson Sermon entitled "Mortals and Immortals."

The selections will include the following from Philippians 2:5, 15: "Do all things without murmurings and disputings: That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world."

A correlative passage to be read from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy states (265 5): "Mortals are graviate Godward, their affections and aims grow spiritual; — they must near the broader inter pretations of being, and gain understanding of the infinite—in order that sin and mortality may be put off."

The Golden Text is from Romans i 8): "They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God."

VISITS SCHOOL IN MEXICO

While in Mexico for a short visit with her husband, Mrs. Elizabeth Clay visited school in Santiago, Nayarit, Mexico. This is how Mrs. Clay tells of her experiences:

From the time I left the United States until I returned I never saw a school bus. It was upon returning to Texas when I saw a little bare foot boy hop off the bus in the afternoon that I fully realized the absence of school busses in Mexico. Although missing was the familiar sight of the big consolidated rural school.

In towns one could spot the "Escuela"—Spanish for school.

In Santiago I followed a group of small boys, dressed all in white, as they carried vases of fading flowers from the cathedral to the school.

The time was nearly 9:00 a.m. Now I'll assume it was the principal of the school who met me and invited me to see the school. She spoke no English and I knew only a few words of Spanish. But she was very pleasant and so happy to take me around to visit the rooms.

The boys, only, were all dressed in white pants and shirts. In each room the pupils were sitting in their seats whether the teacher had yet arrived or not. There was no circulating of pupils over the building.

At the class room door the principal held up one-two-or more fingers to represent the class. The pupils stood and greeted me and I smiled and greeted them. In the 6th grade the teacher had not yet arrived but the pupils were seated and they all rose and said "Good morning." I returned the greeting. The principal picked up a piece of chalk and I wrote my name and address on the board. Then I searched the room for a map. I found one of the United States and pointed to Kentucky. As I left that class room all stood and said, "Good-bye."

At the end of the visit I shook hands with the kind Mexican lady. Even though we faced a language barrier-each understood the other. She had graciously shown me over her school, and I was very appreciative.

Across the street was the school for all girls. They were all dressed in Navy blue jumpers and white blouses.

Each school was built with an open court in the middle. There was no lunch room but I learned the children went home for two hours at noon during the heat of the day.

Telephone Talk

by CHARLES A. HARRIS
Your Telephone Manager

"ASH! MOSH!" These are the lilting words used to greet a telephone in Japan. Here in America most of us say "Hello," synonymous versions of that familiar greeting are found around the world. For instance, in Arabia it's "Ahlan"; in Madrid it's "Hola" . . . in Germany it's "Hallo." The Roman says "Pronto," which means "Ready." Then Cockney Charlie might say "Con queen" meaning "With whom?" Some countries dispense with greetings altogether as in England where the direct Briton says "Smith here," and New Yorker says "Jones here." Though customs differ the world over, the importance and convenience of the telephone is universal.

MAGIC CARPETS reserved for Rajahs? Bet your life they're not! I have one, and so do you right within easy reach. It's your telephone! With it you can whisk away to New York, San Francisco, Hong Kong, Rio de Janeiro in minutes, too. And not only does it speed you to the side of faraway friends, but right here at home it transacts business . . . spreads good news . . . runs errands . . . acts as your personal genie! I'm convinced that where "magic carpets" are concerned, Rajahs never had it this good!

(WHEN YOU WHISK AWAY by Long Distance, your magic carpet will get there faster when you call by number, and you'll wish it took less when you call after six or on Sunday.)

WHERE ARE YOU when the phone rings? Might as well be on a desert island as stranded in room a-way. Yet it's the simplest thing, in the world to be rescued. Ever thought of a kitchen extension at your fingertips? Or a bedroom phone for leisurely chats? And, Dad, why feel like a castaway when you slip off to your workshop? It's so easy to have extensions to suit the whole family for only a few cents a day each. They come in colors as lovely as a bouquet of fresh spring flowers, too!

3 Ways to say "Congratulations"

1. Shake His Hand . . . and tell him you are proud of him. Wish him luck, health and happiness. Not the best method.

2. Give A Gift . . . From the store where he buys himself—Cole's. Nothing could delight him more. Very highly recommended by grads themselves.

3. Do Both . . . Shake his hand and present him with a gift from Cole's—Needless to say this is the perfect way of saying "Congratulations".
