Farm sold at public auction

The son of a former owner of the Frank Conway farm purchased the farm at public auction recently for $38,025 or $505 an acre.

The 65-acre farm, located six miles south of here on U.S. 68, was sold by the Scott-Kendall Sales Co. to settle the estate of Mrs. Elizabeth Sanford Conway.

Edmond (Red) Martin, Bourbon county, bought the farm. It was formerly owned by his father, the late Charles Martin.

Also sold were three shares of Farmers Exchange Bank stock for $180 a share, 97 shares of Central District Warehouse stock for a total of $94.06. Sheep sold for $12.50 per head, corn at $5.00 per bushel and hay at 50 cent a bale.

Ingress, the gift is acceptable according to whatever a man has, and not according to what he has not. (II Corinthians 8: 12, Weymouth)

Assuming that, earnest willthe Corinthian Church had voluntarily undertaken a collection for the relief of Christians in Jerusalem. Paul planned to visit Corinth and asked that the offering be ready when he arrived.

The Corinthians, however, put off giving until they had more means from which to make their offering. But Paul assured them that if they gave according to that which they had, the gift would be acceptable to God.

That which we have can be of more use to Christ than we imagine. Our willingness to do for Christ as much as our means allow is what God needs in order to advance His kingdom.

A lad in ancient Rome said, "Father, my sword is too short." "Well, said his father, "add a step to it." By doing for Christ As much as our means allow, we not only add by what we have, but also help God give blessings to others.

PRAYER: Eternal Father, forgive us for our failure to appreciate the worth to Thee of that which we have. Help us this day to do for Christ as much as our means allow. In the name of Him who became poor that we might be rich. Amen.

FARM FACTS NOVEMBER, 1959

Money Problems. It is the consensus of opinion of those who deal in money that farmers who operate on borrowed capital—and there are few who do not—will find credit a little harder to get next year and interest and service charges a little higher. This higher cost of money comes at an unfortunate time for farmers who are already facing lower income and higher production costs. Farm interest rates, as a rule, have been very stable over a period of years and are still low in relation to other farm costs. However, the total amount of interest paid by farmers has more than doubled in the past ten years simply because the farm debt has risen from 5.3 billion dollars to over 11 billion dollars in that period. And it requires many more pounds of meat or bushels of grain to pay a fixed amount today than it did a few years ago.

Higher returns from government bonds and commercial investments are siphoning off money from many rural communities, making funds for local needs difficult to get in some instances. Not only do country banks feel the effects of this trend but they also do other farmer credit agencies, which in some cases have already been forced to charge in excess of 6% in interest and service charges.

What can farmers do about it? There are several things, but the two most important are to make their credit arrangements early—well before the money is needed—and to have a definite plan for using the borrowed money for productive purposes. Sound lenders like to lend money to people who can use it to make more money but they dislike lending money to people who make no financial progress. Farmers who have developed a good credit history in the past will find little difficulty in getting money next year but the new borrower, or those who have been careless in financial dealings, will find competition for loans keener, with the advantage going to those who have the most to offer in the way of character, collateral and ability.

Progress In Forestry. Two announcements in recent weeks were good news to those who are interested in Kentucky's future. First, there was the approval by the Trustees of the University of Kentucky for the establishment of a Department of Forestry in the College of Agriculture. Second, was the announcement by the Kentucky Division of Forests that their nurseries will have 25 million seedling trees available for landowners next spring. A Department of Forestry at the University will give an opportunity to Kentucky boys to train themselves in many phases of forestry and thus should result in better management and utilization of the state's 11 million acres of forests. The 25 million seedlings will plant many an acre of idle land and even with an 80% survival will provide an additional 20 million trees to be cut at some future date. Farmers who have land suitable for tree planting should get their orders in early. The cost is low and there are government payments available for reforestation.

Newly stocked salt water fish caught in state

Frankfort, Nov. 4—The rock fish, which the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources stocked in Herrington, Cumberland and Kentucky Lakes, seem to be doing all right. The agency reports that one which was stocked in Kentucky Lake last winter has been caught in good condition.

The rock fish, or ocean striped bass, which became landlocked in the Santee-Cooper Reservoir in South Carolina when the water was impounded, reproduced and grew in fresh water unexpectedly. Some rock fish were brough to Kentucky waters by department biologists who hoped it would spawn, reproduce and grow here. Biologists were not expecting to find evidence of reproduction immediately, since this specie does not spawn until it reaches a weight of six pounds, and they are delighted that evidence of the fish's survival has been found.

The "rock", which is the name given it in Kentucky water, was caught Oct. 16.

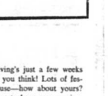
Telephone Talk

by CHARLES A. HARRIS Your Telephone Manager



HOLIDAZE AHEAD! Thanksgiving's just a few weeks away, and Christmas closer than you think! Lots of festive plans being made at my house—how about yours? If the rushy holiday season is going to keep you running, why not ease things a bit with a handy Extension phone where it would help most, in the kitchen, say, where you'll be doing double duty. Or in the bedroom where you can chat in peace. Extension phones come in pretty colors, and cost very little.

SPEAKING OF DAZE—folks planning to build a new home can sure get into one! It's hard to think of ALL the things a new home should have for easy, modern living. If you're planning to build (or remodel) here's a helpful suggestion. Let us help you arrange for concealed telephone wiring. While your house is being built or remodeled the telephone wiring can be built into the walls, and you'll have extra outlets when you need to change your telephone location. Simply call us to learn more about this plan for convenience.

WORKING ON THE RAILROAD. Bell Laboratories has had many well-known "firsts." Here's an interesting one I discovered recently. The first public address system for use on a train—particularly for back platform "whistle stop" speeches—was developed by the Labs in 1923. Designed at the request of President Harding, it was used by him on his last trip across country, concluded by his sudden death on the West Coast. For "whistle stop" speeches or just calling around the corner, Telephone Company research is always coming up with something to get the word around faster, easier!

Since you have been reading about the Nobel Prizes, you might be interested to know the judges who decide the winners. They are the Swedish Academy, the Swedish Academy of Scientists, the Carolina Medical Institute (a Stockholm organization), and five members of the Norwegian parliament.

See where the New York telephone company has been granted permission to charge customers who want unlisted numbers an extra 50 cents a month. Thus a customer pays more for fewer calls, and is charged for not being listed in the telephone directory. This could be ridiculous. Sooner or later, the company might say that for $1 you could have no telephone at all.
