Featherbedding problem

The railroad featherbedding problem is being solved by a new method of processing. Railroad spokesmen say that featherbedding results from old and obsolete work. Annual pay for work not performed, and costs the nation a needless $500 million a year. Most rail labor spokesmen deny that featherbedding exists, at least in any significant degree, and are determined to keep existing work rules in force. A rail management proposal that rail labor jobs with an impartial committee to study the matter was turned down. At there's no meeting of minds between the sides.

Big Problem: Permission To Date

Why can't I have dates like my friends do? This week's letter "I am 16 and my father won't let me have a boyfriend. The average of all the girls I know have company. But I can't get a boyfriend and my father can't let me have a boyfriend. He didn't say, but apparently my father is being a little bit of a hypocrite. This being the case, we will

It takes 1000 tons of coal to build just 1 mile of concrete highway!

That totals 640,000 tons of coal if Kentucky uses concrete for all 640 miles of the new Interstate System. Kentucky needs new coal markets—and new Interstate Highway. Concrete brings the two together. The result? Today's new-type concrete is smooth and solid all the way. It laid fast to do. It actually has a life expectancy of 50 years and longer, with upkeep requiring 70% less than for asphalt. Based on Kentucky records. This is vital because the Federal Government pays 90% of initial construction cost—but not a single cent for maintenance. Add it up. Concrete means greater coal usage, greater driving comfort, and greater maintenance savings. Mr. Fred Ballard, Executive Secretary of the Kentucky Coal Association, has to say: "Concrete and roadbuilding are the two greatest developments of the modern concrete industry. With their high maintenance and long life, the Association believes that paving Kentucky's Interstate Highway with concrete would be a landmark and the end of the coal industry."

NEW TYPE Concrete

The Portland Cement Association has announced that it has developed a new type of concrete that is stronger and more durable than any other type of concrete. This new concrete is made of a special mixture of cement, sand, and gravel, and is designed to last for many years. It is ideal for use in highways, bridges, and other structures that require a strong and durable material. The new concrete is also easier to work with and can be poured in a wide variety of shapes and sizes. It is a true advance in the concrete industry.
