The benefits of music

by Carroll Hall

When a child becomes a member of a musical organization he is on the road to becoming a better person and a better member of our community. These are some of the many benefits that may be his, for the rest of his life, through music:

HE WILL MAKE MORE FRIENDS! As a beginner he will be helped along by the "veterans". As he advances, others will look up to him. He will meet and form solid friendships with the finest young people in the community.

HE WILL GAIN A FINE HOBBY! All through life music can fill his spare time with happiness. Music can be enjoyed almost anytime or place.

HE WILL HAVE FUN WITH MUSIC! Whenever a few musicians get together, everyone starts having fun, whether a performer or a listener. He will enjoy musical experiences that will be remembered through out life.

HE WILL DEVELOP COORDINATION! Just as an athlete, the musician learns how to do his part in the success of the group. He will gain body rhythm, physical poise, and learn how to carry himself confidently erect.

MUSIC DEVELOPS LEADERSHIP! Super "muscles" have little, if any, bearing on musical ability. With talent and regular practice he can attain leadership in his musical group.

MUSIC HELPS IN OTHER STUDIES! When he participates in a good musical group he will learn how to concentrate, how to apply himself. This is frequently carried over to other studies.

MUSIC PROVIDES A CULTURAL BACKGROUND! For rich and full life, much more is needed than just food, sleep, work, and income. He will miss much of what is fine and beautiful in the world if he doesn't have a keen sense of appreciation. Music study will lead to an interest in reading art and culture.

MUSIC AS A CAREER! For the talented student music can offer an interesting and rewarding career. Whether it be as a performer or teacher, the gifted child should seriously consider music as a profession.
