The Upper Room

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11

Read Luke 10: 1-6

Look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest. (John 4:35).

In early autumn we see the golden rice fields stretching from the sea to the purple mountains. When the rice is ripe for harvesting, the sun has scarcely risen before the workers enter the fields. They carry sickles and bend low to cut clusters of rice stalks. They continue their work until the glory of the sunset fades away.

The patient work of the laborers in the rice fields reminds us of the millions of persons in all parts of the world who need to be reached for Christ. No man evangelism can reach all of them; they must be won individually.

Workers on the mission fields today are depending upon us to furnish the sickles of prayer and liberal giving. Thus, many sin-enslaved persons may learn of the everlasting inheritance Jesus has provided for them.

The challenging question that Joshua asked the hosts of ancient Israel, we must answer today: "How long are ye slack to go to possess the land, which the Lord God of your fathers hath given you?"

PRAYER: O Father, may our hearts burn within us for the world's lost millions. Deliver us from the sin of neglect. Awaken us to the need and opportunities to bring others to Christ, Use us as Thou will, In the name of Jesus. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

God calls us to labor for Him in the field white unto harvest. —Mrs. C. K. Dozier (Japan)

Alcoholics can break hold of dread disease

by Louis M. Foltz, M.D., Chairman Kentucky Commission on Alcoholism

There is no specific remedy which makes it possible for an alcoholic to become a moderate, controlled drinker. Eating alcohol into the system is as dangerous to the alcoholic as poison is to the diabetic according to modern medical science.

Alcoholism is now officially recognized as a disease by the American Medical Association. Alcoholics are sick persons. Of some 70,000,000 who drink alcoholic beverages in this country, about 5 million are alcoholics.

Medical science is not yet able to say precisely why some persons develop alcoholism while others, who may perhaps be heavier drinkers, do not. A great deal of study and research still needs to be done, and is being done, on the causes of alcoholism.

Something in the alcoholic's physical makeup or body chemistry may be the cause, although this has not been definitely determined. Emotional difficulties are certainly connected with alcoholism, and the disease may well stem from a combination of physical and emotional factors.

Great progress has been made in recent months in helping alcoholics, thousands of whom have recovered and are recovering. The biggest problem involved is for the individual concerned to recognize and admit that the problem exists for him or her and that help is needed.

The Kentucky Commission on Alcoholism works closely with Alcoholics Anonymous and urges problem drinkers to avail themselves to the help this organization freely offers. Relatives and friends of alcoholics are welcome to attend open meeting of A.A. groups, where they can obtain useful information and helpful suggestions.

Physicians and A.A. members agree that most alcoholics first must have the kind of medical care which only physicians can provide. Certainly every alcoholic should be carefully evaluated medically to determine if there is some underlying disease which needs attention.

Foster homes sought for adult orphans

Children are not the only ones who can be orphaned. W. A Theobald, Chief of Social Work Service) at the Lexington Veterans Administration Hospital, today opened a plea to the community for foster homes for "adult orphans" of the Hospital.

"We have a great need for homes within 50 miles of Lexington where men between the ages of 30 and 70 recovering from emotional disorders can find a family atmosphere," Mr. Theobald said.

These veterans are able to pay for their room and board Mr. Theobald emphasized he is looking for homes that can provide not only food, shelter and care but the warmth, understanding, and encouragement that are part of family living.

He said these men are all veterans recovering from illness but are ready to return to the community.

"They would join their own families, but they have no family or relatives able to provide a suitable home situation," Mr. Theobald said.

Two groups of patients need the help.

First, there are those who need to join a foster home only for a year or so before they go to live on their own.

The second group may never become productive members of society but they have reached the maximum benefit from hospitalization. They can only gain more through family living. Mr Theobald said. They need homes indefinitely.

Mr. Theobald said these veterans would remain in the foster study by the Hospital's medical staff. Foster guardians feel secure with them, more so than the average roomer whom they know little or nothing about.

"Since 1954, we have been placing persons in foster homes in this area. Mr. Theobald said he could use more homes.

The patient pays foster parents for room, board, and care. The foster parents receive continuing consultation from the Hospital through the Social Work Service. Mr. Theobald said.

He added that frequent visits are made to all foster homes, and that if at any time the arrangement does not seem to be working, the parents can ask the hospital to take the veteran back under its direct care.

Those interested in joining this program should telephone Social Work Service, Lexington 2-2500, extension 333.

TV 450 MILES UP! You never know where your next television show might come from. Take the photo here

It's an aerial view of the Red Sea area flashed back to earth from TV cameras in our country's recently launched TIROS satellite. Orbiting some 450 miles out in space, this satellite is observing global weather conditions. The Red Sea is the dark body in the middle of the left in the Nile River, and the shaded area above is the Mediterranean Sea. Amazing, isn't it? Incidentally, I'm happy to report, the guidance system which helped put TIROS into orbit was developed by telephone company scientists—just another bf the many projects they work on continually to make living safer and more convenient for us.

SPEAKING OF SPACE, have you ever thought how easily we can cover space right down here on earth? An ordinary Long Distance call, for example, can send your voice practically anywhere in an instant and at the same time bring you the voices you want to hear. Long Distance —it's really a Space Age miracle, yet it's an everyday service available to us anytime we feel like picking up the phone. How about right now? The cost is little, but there's always big pleasure in a Long Distance call.

PHONE FACTS: In the U. S. and Canada about 17,000 telephones are added every working day to those already in service—which adds up to over 4 million new phones a year.

Important Measures Pending

Still to be considered is legislation dealing with problems resident to a health care program for the aged; an adequate housing program; farm measures, amendments to existing minimum wage laws; federal assistance in education and economically distressed areas. All are momentous issues. In the majority of these areas, the Congress has heretofore submitted a program only to be confronted by Presidential veto and, because of party alliances, it was unable to override. It is expected that the Congress will act on each of the problems. In view of the political atmosphere and the platforms which each of the parties adopted in their recent conventions, President Eisenhower's reactions to the new proposals will be watched with interest.

Final Record In Offing

The Halls of Congress have been temporarily silenced by the National political conventions. The period between the conventions and the general elections is one of the few intervals when congressional activity subsides. During normal adjournments periods, Committee work continues, research is done and material is gathered for the work ahead. But the present recess is unusual as the Congress will return to finish the work load of the Second Session of the 86th Congress before we go to the polls to elect our next President.

The House of Representatives is pretty much caught up on legislative proposals in the major fields. Because of this, the Senate is scheduled to meet a week before the House returns—the Senate returning on August 8th and the House on August 15th. It is expected that the unfinished business can be cleaned up within three or four weeks

STEEL INDUSTRY OWES MUCH TO KENTUCKY MAN

The steel industry celebrates its 100th anniversary this year. Much of the credit goes to William Kelly of Eddyville, Kentucky, whose process opened the door to the modern age of steel.

Kelly was first to discover, the method of producing large quantities of steel economically. His process was to blow cold air through molten iron, producing a hot flame which burned out the impurities.

Although Kelly was first to discover the process, another man, Henry Bessemer of England, reaped the fame and fortune. Neither man knew of the other's work, but each developed the same process.

Bessemer's greater business insight gets the credit for his success. While Kelly went about his work quietly, Bessemer obtained patents in the United States and England and told other steelmakers about his work. This method of making steel soon became known as the "Bessemer Process."
