COOPERATION is a Kentucky tradition!

"TRADING OFF" HELP OR SHARING POWER!
"Trading off" help is a Kentucky tradition as old as the soil itself. Most of us don't think twice before we ask our neighbors and friends to help us out. It's the sort of thing that makes life so enjoyable, cooperative and so easy. And we know that we can count on our neighbors to help us out in the same way whenever we require a little assistance. It's just a case of being neighborly.
Rural electrification is a neighborly cooperation. Kentucky's Rural Electric Co-ops, created by folks who get together to make a better life for themselves... are a good example of how neighborly cooperation works. As the countryside has brightened and prospered, the townspeople who have benefited from the new rural program have benefited from the new rural program made possible by electrification in open areas and cities and towns.

COOPERATION helps electricity to 87,732 rural families in Kentucky, Missouri, Arkansas, Alabama, Texas, Wisconsin, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Tennessee.
