Ashland Oil earnings reported second highest

Expansion of petrochemical facilities and encouraging results in crude oil exploration and production highlight Ashland Oil & Refining Company's Annual Report for 1960, being mailed today to the Company's more than 40,000 stockholders.

Ashland recently reported that sales and earnings for the fiscal year ended September 30 were the second highest in the Company's history. Sales totaled $303,672,333, net income was $14,826,916, and per share earnings on common stock were equal to $2.12.

In a letter to stockholders accompanying the Annual Report, board chairman Rexford S. Blazer and president Everett F. Wells discussed Ashland Oil's key expansion programs for the year.

We are expanding our facilities for the production of petrochemicals", Blazer and Wells reported. "In fact, within another year or two our investment in the field of petrochemicals should be almost as large as our total depreciated investment in conventional oil refining.

Construction of Ashland's new Hydeal unit, which will be the world's first unit to produce commercial quantities of high-purity naphthalene from petroleum, is ahead of schedule. Approximately 90 percent of the estimated output of the unit has been sold under long-term contracts.

We are producing benzene, toluene, xylene and heavier aromatics at our Buffalo refinery and are designing facilities for the manufacture of these and related petrochemicals at other of our refineries. They are located in highly industrialized areas where there exists a substantial and growing demand for petrochemicals."

Blazer and Wells reported in detail on Ashland's waterflood program in the oil fields of eastern Kentucky, stating that estimates confirmed during the year by a prominent independent engineering organization indicated that "waterflood production from the Martha and Beattyville (Kentucky) properties should total approximately 20,000,000 barrels of oil net to our Company, reaching an estimated peak of 16,000 barrels a day late in 1963 and declining gradually over the following 12 to 15 years."

The Company officials also stated that Ashland's production of foreign crude oil was proving to be a profitable investment. Ashland's share of production from Lake Maracaibo, Venezuela, was 4,814 barrels a day during the year, "all of which was delivered under our import quota to refiners on the east coast in exchange for domestic crude oil processed at our inland refineries."

"In Southern Monagas, Venezuela — by the latter part of 1961 initial transportation facilities should be in operation and our 10.79 percent share of production from the concession, which has recoverable reserves estimated at 600,000,000 barrels, should begin at approximately 2,500 barrels a day."

In addition to those Venezuelan reserves, Ashland's share of developed crude oil reserves in the Kuwait-Saudi Arabia Neutral Zone is roughly estimated at 65,000,000 barrels. Ashland has a 12 percent stock interest in American Independent Oil Company, which has a concession covering one-half of the production from the Neutral Zone.

Summarizing the Report, Blazer and Wells said: "We believe our industry will continue to be faced with a world-wide oversupply of crude oil and accompanying surpluses of refined products, with keen competition for markets. Our Company is especially concerned with the problems of finding a market for our growing production of foreign crude oil. We are confident, however, that our competitive position, as regards our domestic operations, is stronger than ever before. We have a young, aggressive organization which we believe will enable the Company to continue to expand and operate profitably."

Christmas play

Station WOZ's "Man on the Street" was at the City School auditorium on Friday afternoon, December 16 at 1:30 to help the pupils of the fifth and sixth grades, under "he direction of their teache, , and Mr. Trivette, present the annual Christmas program.

The program in two parts represented a street scene and a Nativity scene.

In the first set Station WOZ's "Man on the Street" came to a busy street toward the end of a busy shopping day a short time before Christmas, to put on a program interviewing persons on the street. He learned many things about Christmas customs, and stayed to witness another program not of his own planning. Cast of Characters:—Man on the Street, Dan Straw; Assistant to "Man on Street", Michael Mason; Salvation Lass, Phyllis McKee; Postman, Billy Ray Sams; Mrs. Dael, Debbie Ross; Tom and Jan, Otis Crawford and Don Peterson; Mary, Lois Barton; Joseph, Charles Pyman; Carolers, Chorus, Shoppers, Wiseman, Shepherds.

Diced fresh cranberries added to muffin or hot bread mixtures give tasty variations to your regular breads. Or serve hot bread with cranberry butter, made by beating together two parts canned whole cranberry sauce and one part butter. Serve the cranberry butter either warm or chilled.
