The Mail Coming Through.

When I commented to Baker, our substitute postman ("Old Faithful" Caswell couldn't take so many days all in one dose) on how keen and smug he looked in his last-minute zoot suit he said, "Well, I'm not hot, but this thing IS air-conditioned, I believe."

Totting His Horn.

W. D. McCarty has busy mornings "tooting his horn" (not what you think) to give little tots a lift who are trudging through hip-high snowdrifts to get to school. He fills any car he can latch on to, sticking them in endways, sideways, anyways, so long as the door will latch.

When It Rains It Pours.

A friend of mine has a friend who works six days a week and lots of overtime in Bourbon county. They didn't do much the day of the big rain or the next day when the blizzard kept everyone inside. Come Sunday morning and my freind's friend thought it a good time to spend the day in Carlisle. Before he could get shaved, dressed and started the phone rang. It was the boss himself saying, "Bring the truck and come and pull me out, I'm stuck in a snowdrift over here by Cynthiana." That took until almost dinnertime. When they got back there was the livestock taking the place apart and still unfed. It seemed strange their caretaker would be so thoughtless, even in such weather, so they did the feeding at once, then rushed to his home to see "how come." There he lay so ill it was necessary to get a doctor and take him to the hospital as soon as possible. That done, and all the other things connected with it, night was coming on. It was time to water the stock and bank the fires for zero was expected by morning. As my friend's friend opened the door a cold blast struck him in the face once more. Slamming it shut (wasn't told what he said) he at last shaved, warmed his feet and jumped between the blankets teetotally "petered out."

A Letter To Our NON-CATHOLIC Neighbors

Catholics and non-Catholics, as a rule, get along right well together.

Our families live amicably next door to each other and often become lifetime friends. Our sons fight side by side on every battlefield. We work together in the same shops and factories . . . root for the same baseball teams . . . do business with one another in a spirit of mutual trust every day.

In these and other phases of everyday life, there is a close association which promotes understanding and respect. But in religion . . . where this close association does not exist . . . there is often a regrettable lack of understanding and a corresponding absence of good-will.

Many people, for instance, have all sorts of false ideas about Catholics and the Catholic Church. They actually believe that Catholic worship, statues . . . that many sordid things happen behind convent walls . . . that Catholics do not believe in the Bible . . . that Catholic teaching is pure superstition and the Mass nothing but mumbo-jumbo.

All non-Catholics, of course, do not believe such things. But enough of these false rumors are in circulation to cause some sincere and intelligent non-Catholics to look upon the Catholic Church with suspicion, and to reject Catholic truth without even troubling to investigate it.

It is for this reason that the Knights of Columbus, a society of Catholic laymen, publishes advertisements like this explaining what Catholics really believe. We want our non-Catholic friends and neighbors to understand us and our Faith, even if they do not wish to join us. We want them to know the Catholic Church as it really is . . . not as it is so often misrepresented to be.

It is also important to you personally, however, to inquire into the teaching of the Catholic Church. For unless you do, you cannot know whether the Catholic Church is or is not the Church established by Jesus Christ for your salvation. You cannot intelligently accept or reject Catholic teaching until you investigate it and know what it really is.

A distinguished Catholic author has written "A Letter to a Friend Not of My Faith." This letter has been published in the form of a pamphlet which can be read in a few minutes . . . and which gives a remarkably clear and beautiful explanation of Catholic beliefs, worship and history. More importantly, it gives a blue print of Christian living which will deeply move you whether you accept or reject the Catholic viewpoint.

This highly interesting pamphlet is well worth the few minutes it will take you to read it. We will be glad to send you a copy free, on request. It will come in a plain wrapper—and nobody will call on you. Write today . . . ask for Pamphlet No. KC-23.

Washington Reports

BY YOUR CONGRESSMAN JOHN WATTS

Noses Counted This Year

You, and every other individual in the country, will be called on this April 1 by a representative of the Census Bureau as the 1960 decennial census is tabulated. Every ten years since 1790, under Constitutional provision, population figures and other data have been gathered to determine the number of delegates each state may send to Congress, to record our growth, our market changes and trends and to guide legislative action.

More than 170,000 will be employed to record the 1960 Census, according to the Bureau of the Census, which is a division of the Department of Commerce. In Kentucky, with headquarters for the Sixth District census at Lexington, 22 crew leaders and 362 enumerators alone will be employed. Recorders who will be especially trained for the job will take about two weeks to cover every city, hamlet and farm in the nation.

It is interesting to note that our State's Capital, Frankfort, first appeared in the census report in 1800 with a population of 628. Its 1950 report showed an increase to 11,916. In 1790, the entire population of Kentucky was 18,677. The Sixth District in 1950 had 380,806 individuals, while all of Kentucky had 2,000,000 residents.

The Census Bureau reports an increase of 8000 individuals in the United States each day, an increase of one every 11 seconds, or 3 million each year.

We aren't the only ones going to be called on by census recorders. Approximately sixty other nations will also conduct a census this year and forty others have census scheduled for next year. Recordings will be made in 4 countries never having been recorded: Indonesia, one of the world's most populous countries. Afchanistan, Liberia and Ethiopia.

Olympic Torch Starts Here

As host for the first time in 28 years to the Olympic Games this winter, the United States pays its respects to a lasting modern link with ancient civilization and welcomes the world's best winterport athletes from 30 nations.

The winter games are being held at Squaw Valley in California's Sierra Nevada Mountains and will be viewed by more people than ever before, both on the ground and through the medium of television.

The first Olypic Games, of which there is record occurred in 776 B.C., with one event, a foot race near Olympia, Greece. The Games then were religious as well as athletics, and the sacred fires within the Olympic enclosure were the scenes of worship all though the year. It is from these ancient beginnings that the Olympic Torch has been a part of the ceremonies. The torch, opening events this year, was fired in Oslow, Norway, a fire this is never allowed to go out.

The modern Olympic Games, dating from 1896 in Athens became international events, with native nations competing in the first Games. Since then, more than 35,000 athletes representing up to 60 nations have participated in Olympic competitions.

Farmers in southern states buy a half billion dollars worth of fertilizer and lime each year.
