Testing in today's school

Parents, you may hear your children say that he is to be given a standardized test today at school. He may ask you something about it in order for him to understand what he is taking. There are many tests today available to schools to measure intelligence, achievement, aptitude, interests, and others. By giving these tests to boys and girls it helps the school to help the child in future guidance. These tests will tell us how your son or daughter ranks in a grade level and with other boys and girls in the State of Kentucky and our nation, through these tests we can give more consideration to ward these student interest and his capabilities.

Boys and girls start taking tests to measure the development of the individual when he is in the first grade or earlier, and he should have them regularly until he completes high school and is ready for college or to go out in life. A person can be placed more correctly into a good career by using tests that are available. Most employers today use a testing program to fit employees into a job in their company.

Nicholas County is cooperating with the Federal Testing program in order that we can get more testing done here. Here at the high school all our girls and boys will be given a test other than their regular class work in the next few weeks. These tests will be given under school restrictions and will be graded and the test results will be kept here for future purposes. In addition to these tests, some of our Juniors and Seniors are paying out their money to find out information on themselves and to see if he is a type person that should go to college. All colleges are now requiring an entrance college board examination or other similar test that is given before you can enter into the school of your choosing.

Test scores are kept in strict confidence for the preparation of your son for a better way of life.

Few of you parents had the chance to take a test, because they were not so plentiful back in your day. The Russian Sputnik has been a great factor in determining the educational procedures in the last few years.

FARM BUREAU in Action by CH Fields, Kentucky Farm Bureau Fed.

Farm Bureau Sales Tax Position Clarified

Farm Bureau is getting a lot of the credit or blame for the proposed retail sales tax. This is understandable, since we were the first statewide organization to publicly go on record in the three percent levy to improve the public school system and provide other necessary state services. Naturally, Farm Bureau leaders were delighted when Governor Combs agreed with the organization's position in his address to the joint session of the General Assembly.

Since then, however, considerable controversy has arisen over the question of what should and shouldn't be exempted from the tax; and whether the income tax should be lowered at the same time the sales tax is put on.

Farm Bureau's position on both these questions is quite clear, as spelled out by the county Farm Bureau voting delegates at the last state convention. We are for exempting the 3 per cent sales tax on farm production purchases from the tax, such as feeds, fertilizer, seeds, and farm machinery—as well as production supplies and equipment purchased by business and industry; and we are definitely for lowering the income tax at the time the sales tax is passed.

Efforts have been and will be made to distort Farm Bureau's position on exempting production items. On this point, keep in mind that farmers and other businessmen are double consumers. They buy all the retail items, such as food, clothing, medicine, household appliances, and everything else that any other consumer buys; but in addition, they buy certain items necessary to produce commodities that will ultimately be taxed by the retail sales tax. Under Farm Bureau's plan, farmers will pay the retail sales tax on consumer items just the same as anyone else. Taxation of production items would amount to a double retail sales tax.

It would take 16 slices of bread to provide as much thiamine as a pork chop; 17 bowls of cereal to provide as much protein as a pork chop; and 15 servings of spinach to give as much iron as a serving of pork liver.

If you discover poor quality in commercially frozen food, tell your grocer about it. The original quality may have been poor or temperature damage may have developed somewhere in handling.

Soil Conservation Board meets at hospital for January quorum

The Nicholas County Soil Conservation District Board of Supervisors went to the hospital for the January monthly meeting.

Hasn't Missed A Meeting

Charles T. Whaley, a District Supervisor and one of the few Master Conservationists in Nicholas County, was hospitalized early this month. He has missed only one meeting during the last 15 years, so to make his participation possible, the Board met at the hospital in Whaley's room. Sharing the room with Whaley, and also attending the meeting, was Jim Williams, an official of the Nicholas County Fish and Game Club.

Other Board members attending the meeting were Lovell Hollar, Chairman; Norwood Auxier, Vice Chairman; Frank Henry, Secretary-Treasurer, and Howard Sidle.

William F. Threlkeld of the Soil Conservation Service and Foster Adams of the Division of Soil and Water Resources also attended the meeting.

County Education Board appoints Hildreth, House to fill unexpired terms

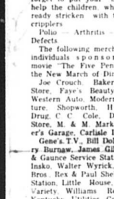
Mr. Hildreth is a Veteran of World War II and served in the South Pacific during the war years. He was a Sgt. 1st Class and operated heavy equipment during the War. After returning from service he took four years of on-the-farm training and now operates a farm. He has a son who is a sophomore in high school and a daughter in the fifth grade. He is a member and attends the Mt. Tabor Methodist Church.



Mr. House also operates a farm and has been a director of the Farm Bureau for several years and has taken an active interest in better farming. He has served as vice-president of the Farm Bureau. Both of the men appointed are outstanding citizens of the County and have shown their interest in the County in all worthwhile undertakings. They have assumed their duties as Board Members.

The Board was re-organized at the last regular meeting and Woodrow Gaunce and Eugene Lester were selected respectively as Chairman and vice-chairman of the Board.

Stockyard offers springer heifers

Through work under social security, thousands of farm people have already qualified for monthly old-age and survivors benefits. Now, according to R. A. Tweedy, Manager of the Lexington district office, for many farmers, age 50-65, can qualify for disability payments.

Disability payments for farmers, as for anyone else, require a certain amount of social security work and a severe disability occurs.

The work needed is 5 years of social security work (20 quarters) in the ten years before the disability occurs.

A farmer who meets the work and disability requirements can receive payments at age 50; if under 50, he can qualify for the disability freeze that will benefit him later on.

Any disabled farmers, under 65, should get full details from their nearest social security office.

Tweedy says, many farmers can qualify for disability payments

Constantinople or Istambul it's a small world – Home again

by W. R. Raborn

El Al (the Israeli airline) was the only one that gave me any trouble about reservations at all. I had to wait an extra day in Tel Aviv before I could get a plane out for Istambul (Stambul to people there and Constantinople to boys and girls of my time). I couldn't make up my mind whether it was due to too many passengers or not enough planes. I suspect the latter.

When we got to the airport in Istambul I was told that there were no first class hotel rooms available. There was a medical conference going on—and that one conference took all the first class hotel rooms. They got me a "second class" hotel that really seemed like a sixth or seventh class to me. I saw the Blue Mosque and St. Sofia, where the Metropolitan of Constantinople excommunicated the Pope of Rome, some ing years back. It is still one of the most beautiful buildings in the world in spite of the four minarets that have been added. The Golden Horn is unimpressive to behold but of enormous value and history.

There are two cities here, the old and the new. It is an interesting experience to pass from Europe to Asia and back across the bridge. The Hilton Hotel is the meeting place of all Americans, there. I had most of my meals in the hotel. At dinner who but Dr. Walter Groves and Mrs. Groves should occupy the next table to mine in Tel Aviv before I could get a plane out for Istambul (Stambul to people there and Constantinople to boys and girls of my time). I couldn't make up my mind whether it was due to too many passengers or not enough planes. I suspect the latter.

70 at C of C dinner, Lebus is guest speaker

In a talk presented at the annual Carlisle-Nicholas County Chamber of Commerce dinner held last Thursday evening, Frank Lebus of the Kentucky Department of Economic Development, Agriculture Development Division, stated:

"Our program is designed to get more plants, to encourage existing plants to expand, to provide more jobs for Kentuckians and to raise the economic level of all Kentuckians. We plan to pave the way to make Kentucky attractive as a state in which companies and industry and people can work and prosper.

"In planning our program, the results to which our governor and lieutenant governor have pledged themselves: more factories, more business, more jobs, a broader base for agricultural marketings, a greatly improved economy, a higher standard of living for all Kentuckians.

"..... Probably the greatest weakness in the industrial progress in Kentucky is in the field of community development. This department's industrial development division has worked on it in a limited way. The Kentucky Chamber of Commerce Community Development Committee, through
