CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Self-examination and purification of thought are essential to spiritual progress. This is a theme to be delt with at Christian Science services Sunday.

Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Sacrament" is the Golden Text from Psalms (139: 23, 24): "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

Citations to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include (8: 25-30): "We should examine ourselves and learn what is the affection and purpose of the heart, for in this way only can we learn what we honestly are."

Scriptural selections will include the following verse: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me" (Psalms 51: 10).

County agents' salaries rise

Frankfort, July — Kentucky will rise from 42rd to 25th among the states in the average salary of county agricultural agents this fiscal year.

The current budget will enable the University of Kentucky's Agricultural Extension Division to raise county agents' average yearly salary from $6,500 to $7,200.

Kentucky also will rise from 42rd to 25th in the average salary paid home demonstration agents, this increase being from $5,241 to about $5,940.

Agricultural officials say these increases will enable Kentucky to train farming and homemaking experts and to keep them instead of losing them to other states.

Money also has been provided to improve the 4-H program.

Aug. 1 deadline for boat registration

Frankfort, July — Operation of boats on Kentucky waterways after Aug. 1 without registration under the state's new boating act will be a violation of this act, according to Boating Director Scott Barbour.

Registration begins the first week in July, coinciding with National Boating Safety Week, Barbour added, suggesting these safety tips for boaters:

Don't overload or overpower your boat. Heed the manufacturer's load capacity and horsepower limits.

Distribute the load evenly and don' stand in a narrow round-bottom boat. If you change seats, keep low and to the center; both hands on the gunwales.

Don't drink intoxicants when driving a boat—a serious offense.

If uncertain about weather, don't go out on the water. If you are out and weather turns bad, come in.

Give swimmers and skiers a wide berth and stay away from beaches. Don't be a hot-rodder.

Don't smoke around gasoline and keep your boat well ventilated.

Learn artificial respiration and carry a first aid kit and manual.

If waves are high, head your boat at an angle toward the wave at slow speed. Waves can be dangerous. Slow down when passing small boats. Dead slow speed is recommended in channels and anchorages. Never make a sharp turn at high speed.

When you see anyone in difficulty with his boat, give him a hand.

June Dairy Month is over; but dairy products—butter milk, cheese, or ice cream—are good buys every month of the year.

National Guard readies for summer training

Frankfort, July 6—Kentucky National Guard units throughout the state are preparing for their annual summer field training encampment, scheduled this year July 10-24, according to Major General Arthur Y. Lloyd, the state's adjutant general. This year's training program will involve some 4,500 Kentucky Guardsmen.

All artillery units of the Guard will conduct training this year, at Camp Breckinridge, located in Western Kentucky, while some 18 armor (tank) units, and the 113th Ordinance Company, will be traveling to Fort Knox. The units at Fort Knox will be under the immediate supervision of Col. Arthur C. Bonnyrastle, of Louisville.

One Guard unit has already completed it's summer field training. The 103rd Signal Company, of Frankfort, commanded by 1st Lt. Thomas Wheat, conducted its annual training at Fort Gordan, Georgia, during the first two weeks of June.

Small advance detachments of each unit will arrive at the army posts July 7 to prepare for the arrival of the main body of troops. All National Guard units will travel in military convoys to the training sites.

Buying cottage cheese during Dairy Month? You can choose from two types. "Country style" or "old-fashioned" cottage cheese has small, firm curds and is good for serving on salad greens. The large-curd type has large, soft curds and is best for cooking and blending with other ingredients.

the Sharp Trader
buys at better than wholesale
...because he buys where his bread is buttered

A REAL sharp trader doesn't need "connections" or "special discounts" or catalogs, or any other gimmick to get what he buys at BETTER than wholesale.

Maybe you think we're kidding?

Not at all. It's a fact. When you BUY in the community you LIVE in, you know that every cent you pay for goods and services above wholesale cost stays here at home with you. By staying here, it can get around to buying MORE good things for you and your family.

It's trading material . . . and TRADE ALONE builds communities with better opportunities, better schools, better churches, better neighbors.

Any ONE of these advantages could bring you returns beyond measure in a BETTER LIFE, as well as real CASH returns in the form of increased business, improved property values, a better job, more people to help you carry the load of normal community expense.

All of this — which you don't get for your money when you buy somewhere else — makes the cost of the actual GOODS very low . . . when you buy them at home.

That's how the SHARP TRADERS get BETTER than wholesale values.

FARM BUREAU in Action
by CH Fields
Kentucky Farm Bureau Fed.

New Sales Tax Is Painful But Necessary For Progress

I have just paid my first penny of Kentucky's new sales and use tax. It was a nuisance, and a little painful but I lived through it.

Few of us will enjoy paying the consumers sales tax, or any other tax; but Farm Bureau has held the position for a number of years that when increased tax funds become necessary, the fairest way to get it is through the sales tax. Farm Bureau has felt for a long time that the tax base needed to be broadened in Kentucky, so that all of the tax load would not fall upon property owners.

It was a foregone conclusion that more money had to come from somewhere to improve the public education situation in Kentucky, and to provide additional funds for other vital programs. The only question was whether the increase was to come from a highter state income tax and increases in property taxes, or through a sales tax that would be paid by everyone.

Although none of us are going to enjoy paying the tax, we might not feel so badly about it if we take a look at what we are going to get for our money. From the standpoint of public services in the field of agriculture, the new tax will mean a great deal to farmers.

First of all, the new Agricultural Science Center at the University of Kentucky which was conceived by a committee initiated by Farm Bureau, will be made a reality through sales tax funds. A million dollars has already been appropriated to begin the planning and construction of the Center, with additional funds promised for future years. This new research center will be extremely important as a foundation on which we can build agricultural development in the future.

In addition, increased appropriations for the College of Agriculture, the Agricultural Experiment Station, the State Department of Agriculture, and for soil and water conservation will make it possible for these agencies to better serve farm people. Coupled with a reduction in the cigarette tax and income tax, which will start on January 1, the new sales tax will make it possible for Kentucky to make badly needed progress in many fields, and at the same time broaden the tax base. As time goes on, many changes will no doubt need to be made to make the tax equitable for farmers and everyone; but these improvements can come with time.

Govt. Payments To Farmers Blown Out of Proportion

Since the so-called "farm bloc" is bound to be one of the major issues in the upcoming election, it will be our intention, from time to time, to put out a few facts that will serve as an antidote to the half-truths and distortions that usually characterize a political horse race.

Take the matter of government subsidies or payments to farmers. A person would think from reading some of the nationally syndicated columns and some of the big magazines that a good portion of farmers income comes from Washington, D. C., in the form of handouts from the Government.

No farmer will defend government subsidies—or at least few of them do; and very few farmers like the idea of looking to Washington for any portion of their income. And the truth of the matter is that a very small percentage of their income does come from this source.

Here are the facts: During 1959, U. S. farmers had a total gross income from farm marketings of $33,459,010,000. Of this total, only $681,317,000 came from government payments of all kinds. This is exactly 2.08 percent, if you care to figure it out. And remember, this is 2.08 percent of GROSS farm income, which is a whole heck of a lot higher than net spendable income. This brings the farm subsidy picture down to its real proportions.

Now, let's take a look at the figures and see where the bulk of the government money is going. In the first place, the wheat belt sticks out like a sore thumb. Here are the states that get the highest percentages of government payments: Texas—12.18%; North Dakota 4.58%; Minnesota — 4.55%; Minnesota — 4.52%; Kansas — 4.12%; Missouri—3.95%; South Dakota — 3.87%; Oklahoma—3.58%.

And yet, Congress has failed to take the advice of Farm Bureau, which has a membership of 1,600,000 farm families, and do something about the wheat surplus mess.

Out of the total government payments, Kentucky farmers get 2.62% of it, and Kentucky ranks 21st among the states in income from farm marketings.

Togetherness In Agriculture Good Only Up To A Point

A lot of editors and other writers and commentators, constantly faced with news from Washington about what Congress is doing and won't do about the farm problem, are coming up with the old idea that the farm organizations ought to get together and speak in a unified voice in order to get what they want 'out of Congress.

Some have even gone so far as to suggest that Farm Bureau, the Grange, and the Farmers Union are happily in agreement on objectives, and that they only need to get together to agree on methods. Nothing, of course, could be further from the truth. No two organizations could be farther apart in their philosophy and objectives than Farm Bureau and Farmers Union.

But what is wrong with farmers having a choice in farm organizations? Why should we expect only one farm organization at the national level? Farmers are against monopoly in any form —even in farm organizations.

The idea that the leaders of these three organizations can somehow or other get their heads together and agree upon common legislative objectives does not take into consideration the fact that in Farm Bureau at least, the leaders don't decide the policies and objectives. These matters are decided by the individual members. The idea that the leaders of Farm Bureau could agree on an objective or program contrary to the policies decided by the members would be unthinkable in Farm Bureau.

Even if this problem didn't exist, any agreements between the three organizations would certainly have to be based on the relative sizes of the organizations concerned. The only fair way to reach agreement would be on the basis of one vote per member. This would mean that Farm Bureau would win all the arguments, since there 1,600,000 Farm Bureau members, compared with less than a million in the Grange and Union combined. Any other basis of reaching agreement would not be playing fair with the Farm Bureau members who have decided on their objectives in democratic procedures. The real problem in Washington is not disagreement between the farm organizations; but lack of backbone on the part of the politicians who find it politically painful to apply sound economic answers to economic problems.

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

THURSDAY, JULY 7
Read John 13: 1-10

He (Jesus) poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. (John 13: 5)

In the upper room that night the Master might have asked John, Peter, Andrew, or another of His followers to perform the menial act of washing feet. He might have told a manservant or a maidservant to come in and do it. He might have simply omitted this much-needed service. But Jesus became the servant. He girded Himself with a towel and washed the disciples' feet.

A master cannot be served until he has demonstrated his own ability to serve. So Jesus humbles Himself to serve us. He who holds the universe in His hand kneels down before us and washes our tired, dusty feet.

So the Son of God took a towel, not simply to cleanse the feet of His friends, or only to set an example for them to follow. He did it to show unmistakably that he who is most is not greater than he who sends. God is like that.

PRAYER: O Thou Creator, who dost astonish us continually by serving us, help us to see that only with the eyes of faith can we witness the glory of Thy service for us. Why dost Thou repeatedly sacrifice Thyself for us? We have the answer in Thy great love. Help us to be grateful, even if we cannot be worthy. In Christ's name. Amen.

Can Good Manners Hide Something?
By C. D. Smith

THIS WEEK'S LETTER: "I am sixteen. I have been dating this older boy and consider him a very nice person. He is polite and thoughtful. He never even smokes unless he asks me if I mind. Now, someone tells me he is 'no good' and that he has a police record. What should I do?"

The more fact that someone has a police record does not make that individual a "bad" person . . . he may have perfect manners and complete assurance of a perfect individual.

Many outstanding citizens have "police records" — parking violations, minor traffic offenses, etc. and, some of the smoothest "crooks" in the business have the manners, attitude and appearance of bank presidents and business executives.

When someone says that an individual has a 'police record' they usually infer that this person is a habitual offender, 'always in trouble with the police.' It such is the case, anyone who associates with this individual too much or too often, is apt to accidentally "get into trouble," too . . . perhaps by just being at the wrong place at the wrong time.

But . . . simply stated, without evidence and fact, the remark that someone has a "police record" isn't enough. The girl who is smart, however, will make it her business to find out the truth.

In the above instance, we all pat the boy on the back when he says he is "strong" about smoke. It is the truth. It appears along the same concrete evidence of the type of person he is himself, as well as he. It is certainly evidence of good manners during and some indication that the individual has a definite sense of "right" and "wrong"; "good" and "bad"—but it is the real person, the one underneath the outward veneer that is important.

The older we get in this life, the more we learn that it is very easy to be "wrong" about people. We mistudge them. We misunderstand them and their intentions. We listen to others, instead of trusting our own judgement. Eventually we come to the conclusion that the best thing to do is to listen to others; to hear what they have to say—and then find the truth of the matter for ourself.
