June 3'60

Dear Friends:

Am enclosing check, for a renewal of The Mercury for one year. Have enjoyed hearing from my old hometown. Sometimes do not see many names I once knew, but have enjoyed keeping up with the growth and knowing what is going on back in Carlisle.

Wishing you much success.

Sincerely,
Nancy Reed Lucas

Editor, The Carlisle Mercury

It is reported that the City Council, last night, (Feb. 1) donated $3,000.00, or more, to The Giffin Farm's Water Project in addition to the sum of $24,150.00 spent to lay nearly a mile of 8" plastic pipe.

The donation was made for the installation of automatic pumps at the watersheds, so that they will start in case of leakage or use of water by the Giffin plant sprinkler system.

No meter is installed in or for this line.

The pipe was bought and laid, without advice or supervision of an engineer, outside the city limits. It was laid under two highways, under bridges, winding in and under flowing streams, in such terrain as to make it susceptible to breakage and leakage.

Being connected directly to the City's pressure tanks a breakage in the 8" line could quickly shut off all service for city water users

A LITTLE YAPPIN'

Mistaken Identity.

Little Nancy was having dinner with us Sunday and turned down a glass of ice tea which was most unusual for this five-year-old, so I asked her again to make sure. With downcast eyes she replied, "I don't want tea today 'cause I been you put aspirin in it." Truth of the matter, she had been saccharine go into a glass.

Flowers for Mrs. Morgan.

When word was passed from one to another that Mrs. Ada Morgan was again a patient in the infirmary from a fall in her room at the Masonic Widows Home near Louisville, she received a large bouquet of glads and about 30 cards and letters from her old Carlisle neighbors. Being unable to write each one personally she wishes Yappin' to extend her sincere thanks and love to one and all.

New Homes Going Up.

A week ago I took two walks to see for myself the new homes being build by my neighbors. A two-room cottage is nearing completion on the extreme end of Morgan street for Millard Snapp and a four-room or is well under way at the side of the present home of William "Tink" Morris on Race street. When completed Morris plans to tear down his old house which has been a landmark for many years.

All's Well That Ends Well.

Bessie and her young sister had been left behind to prepare lunch for other members of their family who were helping weed tobacco beds up on the Concord road. Boiling a kettle of pintos and peeling potatoes was a cinch but the corn pone was something else. Bessie's red face rushed in at our back door. "How do you make bread out of salt-rising meal?" I didn't know either so gave the "assistant cook" a bit of soda and buttermilk before the brain wave struck home—the label had said self-rising meal. Never-the-less, all went well for a time, then there was corn pone just about all over creation before it began to smoke and burn. Bessie breathlessly came running again. "Have we got any lightbread?" We didn't, but always have on hand a few cans of prepared biscuits. Grabbing a couple she rushed back. It was almost lunch time. However, lunch was served by the plant bed owner and it was supper time when the family returned home from their hot day's work. Imagine the surprise when delicious soft brown biscuits met the eyes of the hungry workers! Thanks to the Ballard Biscuit Company of Louisville, Ky.

Mother Wore Mitts.

Not for many a year have I seen so much ribbon as passed here two weeks ago on the way to school the closing day. One little girl that I had not seen for a year stopped by to say hello to me and show me her new dress and "pretties". Instead of a hair ribbon she was wearing lace gloves and—hold your breath—an old-fashioned overskirt just like pictures you will find in the old family album back home. (I looked for pantalets, but couldn't see any). There could have been a bustle too under the folds of the bouffant overskirt. I recall that my mother, aunts and cousins wore bustles and skirts and yards and yards of ribbons—hair ribbons, neck ribbons, waist ribbons of every color and hue that waved in the breeze like flags on the Fourth of July. The very last word to be in true style was the little lace gloves called mitts—and they certainly concealed a "multitude of sins" for the working women's toil were hands. These mitts—liars that they were—were usually black—a good idea as black showed less soil. If they were home-made and lace was scarce they only covered the backs of the hands, leaving the thumb and fingers free and were called "half-handers." Rings were worn on one or more fingers and a bright ribbon around the wrist. Brothers and sisters t.sat was style!

FLAG DAY

FARM BUREAU in Action

by CH Fields
Kentucky Farm Bureau Fed.

Farmers Working For Expanded World Trade

"American agriculture has more to lose than any other segment of our economy if the United States is unable to expand foreign trade."

This is a quote from recent testimony before the Committee On Interstate and Foreign Commerce by Herbert E. Harris, speaking for a million and a half Farm Bureau members in Washington. Harris, who is an expert on international law and trade, told the Committee that U. S. farm exports in fiscal 1959 were equivalent to the production of one out of every eight acres of cropland in this country.

A few months ago, Farm Bureau was joined by the Committee for Economic Development, a group of business and professional men, in urging the President to negotiate further trade agreements. The resolution states that U. S. farm exports in fiscal 1959 were equivalent to the production of one out of every eight acres of cropland in this country.

Farm Bureau is violently opposed to a resolution introduced in the Senate recently by Senator Robert Kerr of Oklahoma and endorsed by Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson, which would tie the American representatives' hands when they go to Europe in September to sit down with 36 other countries to negotiate further trade agreements. The resolution states that it is the sense of the Congress that America would not favor any further reductions in trade barriers.

Several forces against reciprocal trade are developing within both business and labor. Not only are farmers interested in reciprocal trade to build markets for their products but the competition of foreign products coming into this country is the best means farmers and other consumers have of combating labor and business monopolies who would like to administer prices.

Children's Foot Defects Rise

The National Foot Health Council reports that a recent survey completed shows the most frequent cause of children's foot defects is wearing outgrown and improper socks. Bulky socks, which take up too much room in already too-tight shoes, and stretch socks, which exert up to 20 pounds pressure per square inch on the toes should be replaced by socks worn to inch longer than the longest toe.

Next most frequent cause of foot defect is wearing outgrown and poorly fitted shoes in a child's shoe, there should be the width of the adult thumb between the end of the foot and the end of the shoe. The heel should fit snugly, but not tightly, and the arch should provide adequate support. The counter should be firm and wide. Proper care of children's feet is essential to good health, school work and physical activity. This survey showed that 85% of all girls and 65% of all boys develop foot defects by the time they graduate from high school.

Tobacco Plant Troubles

Anthracnose, a destructive fungus disease, has made its appearance. Flea Beetles are also causing serious damage on newly set tobacco and in plant beds in some instances.

Anthracnose has already been found in Nicholas and Bourbon Counties and it can cause considerable damage to plants, if not, checked. This disease looks similar to Wildfire and it usually starts in small circular areas and spreads. The disease causes small tan spots on the leaves which later turns to a papery white. The spots gradually enlarge while stunting the plants.

The following materials at the rates recommended give good control if started early enough.

1. Ferbam—using 5 level tablespoons per gallon of water, or a 15% dust.

2. Zeneb—using 2½ level tablespoons per gallon of water, or a 10% dust.

3. Maneb—using one level teaspoon per gallon of water, or a 2% dust.

Depending upon the size of the plants, in spraying use 3 to 4 gallons of spray per 100 square yards of bed. In using a dust use from 1½ to 4 pounds per bed per application. It is more effective to spray or dust with the canvas off, but it can be done with the canvas on. These materials should not be washed off. Spray or dust 2 times a week until setting is complete. The antibiotics, such as Streptomycin, used for Wild fire control will be of no value in Anthracnose control.

To prevent flea beetles damage tobacco plant beds should either be dusted or sprayed before pulling or some people spray or dust the plants after pulling while in bunches or the newly set plants should be sprayed or dusted after being set out. DDT is the most effective control measure for flea beetles. Either 10% DDT dust may be used or a wettable spray may be applied using 2 to 2½ level tablespoons of 50% wettable DDT per gallon of water. Using sufficient spray or dust to completely cover the foliage. This insecticide should not be washed off.

"Symbol of Yourself"

In June a salute is in order for a lot of events that affect a lot of people—like Father's Day (June 19), new brides, the school recess, vacation days. It is also the anniversary of the admission of Kentucky as a state—June 1, 1792. And June 14 is National Flag Day.

Flags have always been a part of the traditions of the human race, to establish identity, from the time of primitive tribes to the development of complex civilizations. Flags have taken the form of a wisp of straw mounted on a pole, a leather banner, an umbrella, a carved totum pole as well as the carefully designed and thought-out symbol.

In spite of our comparatively short national life, this country has produced a great number of flags. Prior to the Revolution, flags blossomed everywhere, flags of defiance, and of heraldry, some of them with crooked lettering and even some with ungrammatical phrases.

The Star Spangled Banner

The origin of the Stars and Stripes is not known. However, in 1777, Congress authorized George Washington and others to plan a flag.

The first national flag came into being that year when Congress passed a resolution prescribing that the flag have 13 stripes, alternate red and white, "that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field representing a new constellation." Thereafter, when more states were brought into the union, and a new star had to be added, it took an act of Congress and generally a legislative struggle, to create the new flag.

Kentucky and Vermont, 15th and 14th states to be admitted, thus caused Congress to enact a new flag in order to make the necessary change in the field of stars to give them representation.

The first wartime addition of a star to the flag didn't take place until July 4, 1819, when the 21st star for Illinois was added.

The first Flag Day was celebrated on June 14, 1861, in Connecticut. Several other states soon followed Connecticut's lead. As a national fete, Flag Day wasn't officially approved until 1949. Since then "Old Glory" has been and is displayed on all Government buildings. Everyone is urged to observe June 14 as a reminder of our free nation of free people.

He Stood For Truth

We are sorry to learn of the passing of a great man, Boris Pasternak. In just three years he has made himself known to the entire world as a symbol of courage and honesty in a political system that tolerates no deviation from party line thinking among those in his profession. The rarity of a man of letters within the Soviet Union speaking his mind openly and not compromising his integrity in his writing, places Mr. Pasternak on a deserved pedestal in the field of contemporary literature.

As a winner of the 1958 Nobel Prize for his book "Doctor Zhivago", the world outside Russia acknowledges Pasternak as an outstanding writer, in the tradition of Tolstoi, Dostoyevsky and Turgenev. As a man true to his own convictions, the writing of life as he saw it, irrespective of the approval of political rulers, his book while an unusual critique of Soviet communism is more of a personal religious testament.

That Moscow refused to allow him to accept the Nobel Prize, and censured him "for political pamphleteering," is testimony of the narrow concept of the human element in a Communist controlled social order.

Men like Mr. Pasternak testify to the nobility in manlind that is not and cannot be eliminated by any political system no matter how authoritarian.

Today's Meditation

THURSDAY, JUNE 9
Read Philippians 1: 12-20

I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ. (Philippians 1: 19).

The famous preacher Charles H. Spurgeon was fond of this story. Some children were being taught the Apostles' Creed. Each child repeated a clause. Thus they proceeded through the Creed.

One day the minister came into the classroom and asked the children to repeat the Creed to him. All went well for a time. Then there was an awkward pause. "Well," said the minister. "What is wrong?" A little boy replied, "Please sir, he has that believeth in the Holy Spirit isn't here today."

Someone has said that the Holy Spirit is the lost chord of the church. How little is known of His working in the heart! Yet we need Him so much. He is the One who brings conviction of sin, accomplishes His saving work in the heart, reveals the things of Christ to us and leads us into all truth. Happy indeed is the man blessed by the Holy Spirit.

PRAYER: Almighty God, grant unto us the know and experience the power of the Holy Spirit in our lives. Convict us of sin, purify our hearts, grant us wisdom in living as Christ would have us live. In His holy name we pray. Amen.

Should He Have Everything His Way!

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "I am 16 years old. Five months ago I met a boy (age 17) whom I like very much, but when he asked me to be my steady I had to say, 'I'll have to double-date. That's all my parents will allow.' After that he didn't seem too interested, although he stuck by me. In 3 months we have made 3 dates, but some way or another they were all broken. I've never gone out with him.

"Recently I discovered he had been seeing his ex-girlfriend. Then I really 'blew my top.' Did I have any right to do so? Not too long afterward, I went to him and apologized for 'sounding off.' I received no answer, just a smile.

"When I see him, he just ignores me unless I speak first — now, what should I do? Should I let him handle things from here? What can I do to get him back?"

OUR ANSWER: To question one: A girl has no right to "blow her top" when a boy she has never dated, even though she may be with him often at school or anywhere else, goes out with another girl. He is free to do so — and, by the same token, so is she — which is what the other is to do, rather than developing hard feelings. It is time to a boy who hasn't dated with her because his principles requires that she "double-date."

In the matter of letting him "handle" things: No matter a girl ever allows the boy, even if he is a "steady" to completely have his own way. If he is the right type of person, he won't think that everything should be "his way" on his "terms" and, more often than, once he gets everything his own way he begins to lose interest. In the opinion of this writer, a girl of 14 who is allowed to date twice if it is double-dating) is lucky—luckier than most. 14-years-olds. She should appreciate this fact and make no bones about it when some boy asks her for a date. There is no valid reason for a boy to object to double-dating and very few of them do object. When one does, it's time to forget about him and start looking in the other direction.

If you have a teenage problem you would like to discuss, or an answer to a question, write to: TEENAGERS, Box 4307, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK 17, N. Y. Names will be withheld.

'Togetherness' promoted by railroads

Family "togetherness" is now being promoted in passenger trains.

Effective June 1, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad introduced a new "Family Fare" plan, which, according to J. W. Moore, general passenger agent, "permits entire families to travel together by rail at substantial savings in the price of tickets."

One-way family plan fares for two or more members of one family work like this: Head of family pays regular one-way adult fare. Accompanying wife and children 12 and under 22 each pay one-half the adult one-way fare. Each child five and under 12 pays one-fourth of adult one-way fare. Children under five travel free, as always. Savings total about 25 per cent under the old fare.

Round trip fares under the family plan permit a saving of about 22 per cent.

Family plan tickets are good for trips starting on Mondays through Thursdays and are effective between points 100 or more miles apart.

Round trip individual fares have also been reduced permitting a saving of about 17 per cent.
