Aids for weight-watching teenagers

Are you beginning to put on pounds in the wrong places? Then right now is the time to do something about it, says Elizabeth Helton, UK Extension dietitian.

If you're only slightly overweight and are still gaining inches "up" as well as "around", just put a stop to those extra pounds until your height has a chance to catch up, she recommends. The added height will stretch the bulges into curves.

Miss Helton offers two suggestions for avoiding extra pounds—be calorie-wise and take exercise.

When you eat food that gives more calories than your body can use for energy, the "leftovers" are stored as fat. To keep your weight from going up, balance the calories in your food with the energy you use every day. Watching your calories doesn't mean that you must be a slave to a calorie table; a general guide to tell you whether a food is high or low in calories should be enough for your purpose.

But a good figure means more than the right number of calories, she points out. Those vitamins, minerals, proteins, fats and carbohydrates you've been hearing about for years must be considered, too. Without good food you can't have a good figure, so be sure you get the needed nutrients from the food you eat every day.

To keep the calorie count low while still getting the right nutrients, avoid "empty" calories—foods that provide a lot of calories, yet few nutrients. Too often, snacks are made up of "empty" calories; foods such as soft drinks, candy, cake and potato chips are high in calories, score low nutrition-wise. Fruits and dairy foods make low-calorie snacks that are high in needed nutrients.

Finally, don't forget exercise, Miss Helton concludes. Every one, not just those who want to reduce, needs exercise. "Sitting" exercises are in addition to the exercise you get from your daily activities, not only help distribute pounds properly but give you natural grace and poise.

EVER HEAR OF SUN TIME?—Billy Kendall of Sycamore Hill began 20 years ago to accumulate parts from which to make his own sundial, has finally completed it and gone back to good old Sun Time. Most of us have suffered under Daylight Saving Time, Daylight Saved Time and now Eastern Time but who knows about Sun time? In the days of Billy's youth, when the grandfather clock stopped, he consulted the almanac to learn what time the sun would rise the next day then moved the hand to that point. Next morning he was out watching and when the disc showed half over the hill he had only to start the pendulum to swinging and had correct time until the grandfather clock got hungered again. He made the dial from a 20 inch circular saw blade, after removing all the teeth, which neighbors claim was done by biting them off. In any case it is worth a trip to 565 Sycamore Hill and may be seen only a few feet from the street but if Bill is not sleeping you could be late for work as he has 19 more years to explain all the gadgets on it. It is worth your while to see it and you will appreciate the time and care that finally finished it

Buyers to save on items bought before tax begins

Frankfort, Ky. — Revenue Commissioner William Scent must be said Thursday Kentuckians will buy save money on certain articles bought before the new sales tax goes into effect July 1.

He said tangible personal property delivered to the consumer prior to July 1 is not subject to the sales tax regardless of whether such sales are for cash or credit.

He warned consumers, however, not to place articles in lay-away before July 1 as a means of saving the sales tax Layaway items would be subject to the tax after July 1, he said.

Scent asked the consumer to keep in mind that delivery must be made on articles purchased.

He said the buyers should keep in mind also that the tax applies only to tangible personal property such as furniture and appliances and will not be levied against such things as real estate, stocks and bonds, and professional services such as doctors' and accountants' services.

Scent noted too, that new cars are not to be subject to the sales tax. The 3 per cent receipts tax which has been repealed effective June 30.

He said that the 1960 Legislature had lowered the state's sales tax from 3 cents to 2½ cents and the application of the tax will not necessarily result in an increase in cigarette prices.

Church buys Ockerman property

The congregation of the recently organized First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) has purchased the property of Mr and Mrs. Innis Ockerman on Locust street, Roger Pollmark, member of a committee named by the congregation, announced Saturday.

Purchase of the residence was approved at a congregational meeting held Thursday night. The price paid was approximately $12,000.

The congregation will get possession of the building about Sept. 1. Womack said plans include remodeling the lower floor to provide an auditorium and Sunday school rooms and the second floor will be used for Sunday school rooms and a parsonage.

Long-range plans call for construction of a modern church building with the present building used exclusively as an educational building.

The congregation is holding services this summer at the Concord Church, about two miles from Carlisle. The Concord Church, which was the first Christian Church in Nicholas County and plans are under way for a celebration to be held this summer to mark the 100th anniversary of the construction of the present building.

Services will continue at the Concord church until the building purchased is available, Womack said.

Game season set at quarterly wildlife meet

Frankfort, Ky., June—Seasons for squirrel, deer, rabbit, quail, grouse and furbearers were set at the regular quarterly meeting of the Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission at the office of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

For the squirrel season the state has been divided into an eastern and western region with different shooting periods for each. Again this year, after a lapse of several years, the season is divided into two parts in each region. In the Eastern region, which includes following counties: Lewis, Rowan, Menifee, Powell, Estill, Jackson, Rockcastle, Pulaski and Wayne and all other counties lying east of those named, the season will open on August 27 and continue through October 30. The second season in this region will open on November 17 and continue through December 11. The other counties are called the western region and the first part of the season will open on August 15 and continue through October 15. The second part will open on November 17 and continue through November 29. Squirrel hunting on the Ballard County area will open on August 15 and continue through October 15 and the bag limits remain the same with six per day or 12 after two or more days of hunting.

The hunting of squirrels with rifles of .243 caliber or large or shotguns with slugs or buckshot is prohibited.

The Commission also has barred the use of guns in the Big Sandy Area during the season. An exception is that a land owner or tenant may protect his property from damage by animals or birds during this period.

A total of 37 counties will be open to deer hunters this year, with 20 counties closed. The counties, which were open last year, have been closed. They are Carter and Hancock. Five counties have been added and they are Letcher, Rockcastle, Estill, Lee and Powell. The archery season will open on October 19 and will continue through November 27. The four day gun season will open on November 28 and will continue through December 3. Either does or bucks may be killed with one deer tag for the season.

The season on rabbit, quail and grouse will open on the third Thursday in November this fall and in the future. The seasons for this year open on November 17 and continue through January 15.

The bag limits remain the same as for last season—rabbit eight per day or 16 after two or more days of hunting, quail 10 per day or 20 after two or more days of hunting and grouse four per day or in possession.

The furbearer season opens on November 17 and continues through January 15 and is for the first time in many years the trapping of beaver will be permitted. There is no possession limit on furbearers.

SAC announces low-level flights of B-47, B-52 jet bombers here

Strategic Air Command B-47 and B-52 jet bombers will begin flying low-level missions over Carlisle within the next few weeks, General Thomas S. Power, SAC Commander in Chief, announced today.

The mammoth jet bombers will fly both day and night missions in all types of weather, General Power said. This low-level flying will increase SAC's combat crew proficiency, enhancing the crews to perform any bombing tactic in any type of weather, day or night, the general added.

Carlisle is along an air route recently approved by the Federal Aviation Agency for use by SAC in its low-level training, General Power explained. Both the six-jet B-47 and the eight-jet B-52 will fly at altitudes of 1,000 feet above highest point along their routes.

The route begins at Richwood, West Virginia, just southward to a point west of Charlottesville, Virginia, north to Westerport, Maryland, then southwest to Lexington, Kentucky.

General Power emphasized that the bombers will fly at about 280 miles per hour, so local residents will not hear sonic boom. "In fact," he added, "SAC will do everything possible to cause as little annoyance as possible to citizens along the route."

"At the same time," he continued, "We hope everyone will realize the necessity for training our crews under all types of situations. In every case, the safety of local residents and of our crews will be the paramount factor in our planning." General Power concluded.

Church plans building fund

The Wesley Chapel, C.M.E. church of Carlisle has planned a building fund drive for August 1st. According to the pastor, the Rev. Moses Button, the congregation plans to raise $1,000 in order to take advantage of a plan by which the state Conference would match any fund for building or improvements with a minimum of $1,000.

The money is to be used to make repairs on the nearly century old structure located on north Broadway, Carlisle. A committee of three trustees have been authorized to receive and solicit the fund from the membership and interested individuals and organizations in the Nicholas County area. The committee consists of George Summers, Frank Boyd, and Alando White.

Polio vaccine available at Health Dept.

With two months remaining before the late-summer peak polio season in August, unvaccinate children and adults still have time to get the important first two shots three weeks apart, according to B. F. Reynolds, M.D., Health Officer, Nicholas County Health Department. Complete polio Vaccination calls for two booster shots in addition to the initial two shots.

Kentuckians in general are poorly protected and children under five years old are especially subject to the risk of paralytic polio. Surveys made by the department in the spring and summer of 1959, showed that only 34.9% of rural children under five had received full protection against polio. The percentage for an urban sample of Louisville, Ashland and Lexington was only 38.1% for the same age group. Among young adults, ages 15 to 39, 25.9% of the rural group and 28.4% of the urban group had completed the polio vaccination series.

For the nation as a whole, there were 5,894 cases of paralytic polio reported in 1958, and an increase of 54% over 1958, and almost double the number for 1957. Nearly one-half of all paralytic cases were among pre-school-age children. Most cases occured among unvaccinated children and adults.

Nicholas County Health Department has received some vaccine through the Kentucky State Health Department to supplement supplies available from private physicians and from the local health department.
