

Cattail control needed to keep ponds useful

Specialist: 1) Pull them out by the roots when they first appear in a farm pond. If allowed to stay, these plants will develop and become a serious pest. Cattails are hard to eradicate. 2) Use chemical killers if desired. One is Diquat, a water-soluble powder used at the rate of 100 gallons of water for large areas, or approximately 100 gallons of water for smaller areas. Spray the plants, waiting five days before pulling them out. 3) Use a herbicide which kills the plants thoroughly as the material kills by absorption through the leaves and stems down to the roots.

Strawberry mites need control

Kothane insecticide is a good material to use on strawberry plants for control of mites, the tiny bugs that cause considerable damage to the plants. U. S. Department of Agriculture Extension Station entomologist, said this week that dry years are particularly favorable to mite development. And mites are particularly abundant on strawberry plants which have been in the field for several years.
