Keep Food On Hand Hurry-Up Meals
Be prepared for those unexpected guests or for the days when you don't have time to plan and cook a meal. No need to fear such emergencies if you have on hand the ingredients needed to prepare hurry-up meals for your family or guests.
A well-stocked emergency food shelf is one of the greatest helps in preparing quick meals. Stock this shelf with canned foods, crackers and macaroni products.
Condensed soups and canned vegetables such as tomatoes are convenient to have on hand. Canned dry beans that have been cooked can go into a quick baked bean casserole. Canned fruit, juices and syrups can be made into desserts or sauces for cake or ice cream.
Many different kinds of fresh vegetables salads are quick and easy to make. These can be changed into one-dish meals by adding strips of cheese and ham or sliced luncheon meat. Fresh fruits can be made into a fruit salad or combined with cottage cheese or sour cream as an appetizer or dessert.
The home freezer is a valuable asset to the cook who is short of time if she planned beforehand. Some "ready-to-shove-into-the-oven" dishes which need little or no thawing first, serving-size packages of meat, patties and frozen fruits are helpful when preparing meals in a hurry.
Sandwiches, salads or cream dishes can be made quickly from sliced cooked chicken or turkey from the freezer. Frozen bread can be thawed quickly for making sandwiches. Sponge, angel food or pound cakes also come from the freezer practically ready to eat.
Serve your hurry-up meal with a hot or iced beverage or cold milk. Your family and guests will be pleased—and so will you, for you won't be too tired to enjoy the meal yourself.

Nixon's promise a gamble, Johnson says

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 21—"Reliance on the Vice-President's promise to favor continuance of the present tobacco program would be a gamble," Keen Johnson told Kentucky growers in a statement from his headquarters here today
