Threlkeld urges farmers to work on soil erosion

"The harvesting of tobacco is leaving exposed the erosive workings of water during the past growing season", said W. F. Threlkeld of the Soil Conservation Service. Across many fields are little gullies made by water running off the land. Sheet erosing has removed thousands of tons of soil. From the fields have washed fertilizers as well as the soil, and has been moved to the ditches and onto the highways and into rivers. Would you like to shovel this same amount back onto your crop land?

Now is a good time to consult your conservation district supervisor, to get assistance in planning practices that will prevent, or reduce, a recurrence of destructive erosion. Runoff water can be diverted at the base of hills to prevent it from running across crop land. Water that falls on row crop land can be prevented from running across the fields by the use of terraces which slow down the water and reduce its erosive power.

One farmer said "I don't have much soil on top of my rocks, so I want to keep the little I have". Another said, "Since building terraces, soil tests show the need for less fertilizer each year. I no longer loose my fertilizer by erosion."

The construction of terraces and diversion channels are cost-sharing practices under the Agricultural Conservation Program.

Farmers are encouraged to see the County ASC committeemen, or ASC office, or the Soil Conservation Service personnel working in the county, according to the Chairman of the Nicholas County Soil Conservation District Board of Supervisors.

School personnel attend District Meeting Sept. 21

Personnel from the State Department of Education, conducted a District IV meeting at the Harrison County high school in Cynthiana on Wednesday, Sept. 21. Schools administrative and supervisory personnel from Bourbon, Harrison, Scott, Nicholas and Robertson County Systems and Paris, Cynthiana, Georgetown, and Carlisle Independent systems were in attendance. Impressed ing Nicholas County were Raymond Wesley, County Superintendent, Otis R. Fryman, pupil personnel officer, Charles Wilson, principal, Nicholas County high, Elmer Bellamy principal Nicholas County Grade, Mrs. Elizabeth Clay school lunch director, and Mrs Hazel S. Gempp, supervisor Frith the City school, Tebay Bebe, Superintendent and Miss Nancy Talbert, principal.

The State Department of Education introduced the new plan developed whereby the State has been divided into six major geographical areas for supervisory services. It is believed this approach will focus attention upon the improved educational opportunities in the context of a total program with greater cooperation and efficiency of operation.

Nicholas County is in District IV. D. C. Anderson explained the purpose of meeting and the responsibility of the State Department of Education assisting the school districts in program planning and development. Charles Neal gave the State, Federal, and local relationships in program planning and development. The is set by national appropriations for vocational education. The plans and the policy is carried out at local level.

Henry Pryre stressed the Guidance Program and Miss Nelda Bailey explained the Library Program. Miss Jane Lewis represented the school lunch program. Lunch was served in the school cafeteria. The afternoon was devoted to a study of elementary and high school reporting forms.

Sam Taylor summarized the need for educating the public on why Kentucky considers a Constitutional Convention necessary. The education is to continue to advance in Kentucky certain specified articles of the Constitution must be changed.

Pluto puzzles astronomers

Pluto remains a puzzle to astronomers 30 years after its discovery.

Is the remote planet a runaway satellite? What is its diameter and mass? Is it many times denser that the earth?

Pluto, incredibly frigid, dark, and barren, is the ninth and most distant known planet in the solar system. It is 3,666,000,000 miles from the sun and requires almost 248 years to complete an orbit, the National Geographic Society says.

Dr. Gerard P. Kuiper of Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wisconsin, believes Pluto is a moon that escaped from Neptune. He theorizes that three satellites originally revolved around Neptune. Gradually as the huge planet lost much of its centrifugal mass, its gravitational grip grew weaker. The satellites swung farther and farther from Neptune and eventually went their own way. Two were recaptured when they came close to the planet again, but Pluto remained free.

Egg-Shaped Orbit

To support his theory, Dr Kuiper points out that Pluto rotates only once in 6½ days, and makes a highly eccentric journey around the sun. The egg-shaped orbit is canted at an angle of 17 degrees and periodically cuts across Neptune's path. The two bodies pass collading by a comfortable 240,000,000 miles. From 1969 to 2009, Pluto actually will come closer to the sun than Neptune.

Visual observations through the 200-inch telescope at Palomar Observatory made in 1950 indicate that Pluto's diameter is only 3,600 miles less than half that of the earth. Previously, Pluto was thought to have roughly the same mass and diameter as earth because of its effect on the orbits of Neptune and Uranus.

If Pluto has a diameter of only 3,600 miles, it must be 10 times as dense as earth in order to have the mass necessary to disturb the orbits of Neptune and Uranus. Such an enormous density—five times that of lead—is considered unlikely. Some astronomers believe Pluto's density is normal and its mass only about three per cent of earth's. They say the orbital perturbations were incorrectly measured.

However, both W. H. Pickering of the Harvard Observatory and Dr. Percival Lowell, founder of Lowell Observatory, Flagstaff, Arizona, predicted the region where Pluto would be found on the basis of its disturbances of the orbits.

White Patch on Planet

Some scientists argue that it is too much of a coincidence that two eminent mathematicians could obtain independent accurate results from erroneous data. They speculate that Pluto has a mottled surface and measurements of it cover only a large white patch, not the whole planet. This would make it large enough to perturb other planetary orbits.

Dr. Lowell died before he could complete his search for the predicted planet. In 1929, Clyde Tombaugh, a 24-year old astronomer, joined the celestial hunt for Planet X at Lowell Observatory, where he was to scan 90,000,000 star images. He methodically photographed the same area of the sky several days apart.

Professor Tombaugh, now of Las Cruces, New Mexico, skipped the photographs of a sky segment into a "blink" microscope and blinked them. The apparatus quickly imposes one picture on another. As he watched, fixed stars remained in position. But an image no larger that a pencil's dot appeared to jump back and forth. It was Planet X, later named Pluto.

Ironically, examination of plates taken earlier by both Lowell and Pickering showed that they had captured weak images of Pluto, too faint to be recognized at the time.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Waits spent the weekend with their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. David E. Galyon.

Columbus carried muskmelon seeds on his second voyage and had them planted on the island of Isabela in 1494. From there they spread to both American continents and were being grown by Indians early in the 16th century.

Wishbone, drumstick, white meat, dark meat—there's favorite for nearly everyone when you serve turkey. Turkeys are in plentiful supply—and prices are attractive, too.

COMMENT

Kay T. Fisher

Last week in our 40 years ago column we mentioned Mrs. Henry Potts, president of the local Parent-Teacher Association, attempting to establish penny lunch room at the city school. As we a'l know she was successful in that project and the lunches so delicious the town citizens wanted to eat at the 'Penny Lunch'.

In the mail this morning came this note from Mrs. Will G. Snapp, the former Mary Potts I thought it most interesting.

Sept. 26, 1960

Dear Kay

Thank you for mentioning mother in your 40 years ago column last week. It would have pleased her, though I can hear her now saying "the credit should have gone to Mrs. Ella Roselle and Mrs. Nelson Fryman and daughters were hosts Sunday for a family reunion at their home. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tudor, Covington; Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Snapp, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Forston Jr., and two sons of Lexington; Herman Snapp, and Mr. and Mrs. Orville Atkinson and daughter all of Carlisle.

Mrs. T. M. Smith of Lexington, spent last week with her sister, Mrs. O. R. Gaffin.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Feldmann and two children accompanied her father, Bruce West home Friday. Mr. West had been with his daughter and family in Kartanger, since the death of Mrs. West, the latter part of August. Mr. West plans to spend some time at his home here.

Mrs. Norwood Auxier, was a registered patient last week, at the St. Joseph's Hospital in Lexington.

Mrs. R. B. Grannis of Dayton, Ohio, spent Friday and Saturday with her mother, Mrs. George W. Taylor.

William Donnell of Lexington, was here Sunday and attended church at the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. R. Burton and daughter, Miss Ellen Burton of Lexington, were guests of Mrs. S. W. Keller, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Will G. Snapp and Mrs. Ruth Clary of Lexington, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gaunce, Sunday.

Miss Cynthia Yazell of Cincinnati, was the weekend guest of her aunt, Mrs. Marshell Ruddell and family.

James W Parker, president of the Deposit Bank. was con-

Roselle and Mrs. Edie Young".

Here is one of the 1920 Penny Lunch menus

Meat loaf & gravy 3¢
Cream tomato soup 3¢
Macaroni & cheese 3¢
Dried beans 3¢
Stewed prunes 3¢
Potato salad 3¢
Hot rolls & butter 2¢
Fruit gelatin & whipped cream 3¢

Wouldn't you love to step into that first Penny Lunch room today and order a menu like that, not only because of the cost but for the way it tasted?

Sincerely,
Mary

We Salute the Nicholas County Fair

May we take this opportunity to express our thoughts concerning the 23rd annual Nicholas County Fair to be held today, Friday and Saturday at the Carlisle Armory.

Exhibits cover the very best of Nicholas County: tobacco, cooking, canning, garden produce, dairy cattle, 4-H records, FFA crops, FHA sewing, industrial arts, pony show and pet show.

The time and talents of many persons go into making the fair a success each year, and they are to be congratulated for their effort.

While in Carlisle this weekend, stop in our store, we are always happy to see you.

Sen. Kennedy's speaking schedule is revised

LOUISVILLE—A revision of Senator John F. Kennedy's schedule in Kentucky Oct. 5th and 6th has been announced by Louis Cox, Kennedy co-ordinator for the State Democratic Campaign Headquarters.

Speeches at Mayfield and Morehead scheduled for Oct. 6th have been cancelled and the time and locations for speeches at Louisville, Bowling Green, Lexington and Covington have been altered.

Cox said the stops at Mayfield and Morehead were cancelled by Democratic National Headquarters because the airports were not large enough to handle the trio of four-engine DC-6's used by the Kennedy party. The large planes carry Kennedy, his staff, and over 75 newspaper, radio and television reporters. Newsmen would not be able to accompany Kennedy to either city.

Pedley heads Religious Freedom unit

LOUISVILLE—G. M. Pedley of Princeton, veteran newspaper editor and publisher, today was named chairman of the newly-organized Kentucky Committee for Religious Freedom.

Smith Broadbent, Jr. State Democratic Campaign Chairman, said the committee was formed to help Kentuckians "better understand religious freedom in its true meaning."

Pedley was the first Director of Relations of Public Information for the Princeton Leader and Lyon County Herald at Eddyville. he was city editor of the Lexington Herald and later managing editor of the old Owensboro Inquirer

Pedley, a Presbyterian, is a graduate of the University of Kentucky and a past president of the Kentucky Press Association.

In a statement prepared for release, Pedley said, "it is tragic that men who are servants of God have chosen to use their positions and influence to turn Christian against Christian.

"The Kentucky Committee for Religious Freedom was not formed to prevent the injection of religion into politics," Pedley said. "Though we deplore it, religion has been made an issue in the current presidential campaign. But it is our hope that through rational, factual reasoned discussion of this issue we may help to prevent further bitterness and misunderstanding, and help the citizens of Kentucky to understand more fully the American blessing of religious freedom in its true meaning.

"The members of this committee believe sincerely in religious freedom for every American, in the right of every man to worship as he chooses without fear of handicap, prejudice or penalty, and in the essential goodness of our Constitutional guarantee of religious freedom in and through Government."

The statement continued, "we grieve that today religion, which binds all men together in the belief in and search for God, is being used to divide men.

"We see only danger, against which our founding fathers tried to provide in our Constitution, in attempts to establish religious qualifications for public office.

"Our committee will, whenever and wherever possible, seek to prevent bitterness, encourage understanding, correct error, and promote tolerance and harmony among all Americans.

"We ask everyone interested in true religious freedom to join us in our effort."

Sales tax funds increase payments to dependent children

Kentucky's public assistance program, rejuvenated by new sales tax appropriations and matching federal funds, has provided for the second straight month Nicholas County's dependent children with monthly payments in excess of the 1959 levels.

According to Commissioner of Economic Security Jo M. Ferguson, last month's average payments per family were $63-12—an increase of $12.16 over August, 1959. The total amount paid to the county's dependent children reached a new high of $2,078.

Commissioner Ferguson added that funds exceeded 1959 limits all over the state. He said the new totals have put Kentucky in the lead over all southeastern states in the amount of public assistance given to indigent recipients.

BUYS HOME ON MAIN STREET

Mrs. Mike Berry purchased Monday from Manuel Crawford and wife, a house and lot on West Main street, formerly known as the Hub Endicott home. Mr. Crawford has been remodeling the home for several months. It is understood Mrs. Berry plans to live there.
