100 YEARS AGO

volunteers to serve three months—three months should do it, he thought. In the South, President Jefferson Davis on the following day called for 32,000 troops, to swell the Confederate Army to more than 60,000.

Soldiers Drill

Within 48 hours, companies and regiments were drilling in hundreds of cities, towns and hamlets in both North and South and women were busy sewing blue or gray uniforms. Everywhere, on both sides, it was a week of wild enthusiasm, mass meetings, parades, bands, speeches, fireworks and farewell goodbyes of newly enlisted soldiers going off to war.
But while the people celebrated, Davis and Lincoln watched the middle Border Slave States to see their reaction. It was quick in coming.
"Kentucky will furnish no troops for the wicked purpose of subduing her sister Southern states," wired Governor Beriah Magoffin April 16 in answer to Lincoln's call for troops. He was to be overruled by his fellow citizens, however. That same day from Tennessee, which was later to join the Confederacy: "Not a man for coercion but 60,000 for defense of our rights and those of our Southern brothers."
Missouri's governor called Lincoln's actions "unholy and diabolical," but his state would remain in the Union despite him.
North Carolina, which had not yet joined the Confederacy, sent troops to Richmond instead of Washington. And in Maryland, where the governor sympathized with Lincoln, secessionists burned bridges and blocked railroads, effectively cutting Washington off from the North for nearly a week.
Finally, from Virginia came the severest blow to Lincoln. On the night of April 17 Virginia seceded from the United States.

Not All Romance

No sooner had these decisions been made when the first indications came that the war would not be all romance.
First, on the night of April 19, federal troops, menaced to the danger point by Virginia militia, met, set fire to Harpers Ferry arsenal 40 miles west of Washington, leaving it to the Virginians.
Next day, Lincoln proclaimed a blockade of the entire Confederate coast.
And on that same day bloodshed occurred at Baltimore. The Sixth Massachusetts Regiment, passing through the city, collided in riot with an armed crowed of Southern sympathizers, and when it ended, 11 citizens and four soldiers lay dead.
And the following day at Norfolk, Va., at the mouth of the Chesapeake bay, a force of Union soldiers sailed into the large federal navy yard, which was not yet in Confederate hands. When they left early the next morning, the installation was aflame, with ships sinking at their anchorage.
Next week Enter Lee and Grant.

erable benefits since I became a member.
For 15 years I have worked in the school lunch program in Nicholas County. First, I was a cook at East Union School and now for the past eight years I have been manager at the Nicholas County high school. My close association with school personnel and with the students has brought to me many of the problems with which we as a Nation are faced in making the daily diet of our chitrens nutritionally adequate. As a nation, a community, a school, a family or an individual, we are what we eat. A diet which is nutritionally deficient will not adequately equip us as citizens and our health, happiness and well-being may be endangered.
If our boys and girls can be taught to eat properly we are well on our way toward increasing the health of our Nation.
I know that it is not enough to merely serve a hot meal but it is important to serve one which will supply food from the basic seven requirements and which will include needed protein, vitamins, minerals, carbohydrates and fats To be able to serve a Type A lunch which will be attractive looking and appetizing is also essential."

The future of his farm depends on many things—one of the most important being a continued source of dependable, low-cost electric power . . .
As the demands of a growing nation increase, farms must become more efficient, more productive . . . And just as Rural Electrification has brought great advances in farm operation during the past quarter-century, so does it stand ready to serve the needs of the future.
The job is not yet done . . . some areas are now "under-powered", and lines must be heaved-up to meet the demand. A strong Rural Electric System, supported actively by its Member-Owners, is the best guarantee that there will be "a farm in his future!"
