Social Security work requirement is much lower

"One question we hear a lot," says R. A. Tweedy, District Manager of the Lexington social security office "is how much social security credit is needed for people to qualify for old-age or survivors benefits?" Today, this newspaper offered Mr. Tweedy the opportunity to give the answer.

Mr. Tweedy not only gave us the answer, but it's news. The Social Security Act was changed in 1960 and the amount of work covered by the program needed by workers now reaching or past retirement age, or who have died, is less than it was. Under the old law, the worker needed social security credit equal to one year of work for each two years after 1950 and before he died or reached retirement age.

The new law, however, specifies that this worker now needs social security credit equal to only one year for each three years after 1950 up to the year he reaches retirement age or dies. Under both the old and the new law, the total social security credit needed can be earned anytime after 1936—no one needs credit for more than 10 years' work, and a minimum of a year and a half of work under social security is always required.

Because of the new law, many people who have had their claims for old age or survivors benefits rejected because of lack of sufficient work credit may now be eligible. For instance, all workers who reached retirement age (65 for men, 62 for women) before 1957 need credit for only 1½ years of work under social security to be eligible. Under the old law, such people who reached retirement age before July 1954 could qualify with credit for only 1 year of work.

Tweedy urged people who have had an application for benefits turned down, or who have failed to apply in the past because of insufficient social security credit, to get in touch again with the social security office. They may now be eligible for benefits.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Man's God-given freedom from sin and temptation will be explained at Christian Science services this Sunday.

Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Everlasting Punishment" is the Golden Text from Ezekiel 18:3: "Repent, and turn yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be read p. 318: "The likeness of God we lose sight of through sin, which beclouds the spiritual sense of Truth and we realize this likeness only when we subdue sin and inherit man's heritage, the liberty of the sons of God."

A selection to be read from the Bible states: "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure. Do all things without murmurings and disputings: That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world" (Philippians 2).
