Valentines for Daddy.

No doubt a couple of young men received the shock of their lives last week when informed by attendants at the Nicholas County hospital that they had become the father of twin sons. On Wednesday, Feb. 8, Mr. and Mrs. Billy King of Lexington became parents of twin boys. Mrs. King was the former Betty Hollar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. "Boss" Hollar of Carlisle.

On Saturday, Feb. 11, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Jefferson of Carlisle also became parents of twin boys. Mrs. Jefferson was the former Wanda Ahnee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Ahnee of High street.

In Memory of Pevie Feeback.

It is with deepest feeling that I shall always remember a distant cousin and one of the best friends I ever had—Pevie Feeback. As far back as I can recall when both families lived on the Maysville & Lexington turnpike between the Barterville and Headquarters roads we were as close friends as any cousins could be and a little girl can get to be. I thought I loved her because of her beautiful face and I had been told that I looked somewhat like her. When I grew up a bit I realized that it was her beauty of heart and soul that made me love her. Eventually, both families moved and years passed before we again met and became friends and neighbors in Carlisle. She lived at the hotel and my family on West Main when my parents became ill. A sister could not have done more than she did for me and my invalid parents. I was working at the Mercury office even then, and trying to hold our home together. Many is the time when Willie "Dusty" Wilson, in his white coat, would come in a run with hot soup, a plate of vegetables, a few pieces of hot cornbread, or possibly half of a pie—delicious food properly taken care of by Charity Marks, one of the best cooks that ever cooked—not enough for a hotel meal, but a dinner for three—sent down by Pevie. Then when my right arm was broken in a fall on the ice, Pevie scarcely missed a day coming, bedding on to "Dusty" to steady her foothold, to do the things for me and my parents that we could not do for ourselves (Johnny Was doing his bit for his country at this time). Yes, it is with sincerest love that I shall never forget Pevie Feeback and her loyal employees at the Feeback Hotel

Do Whiteners In Household Detergents Really Whiten?

USDA research has shown these modern detergents differ widely in their ability to whiten fabrics. Studies on washing unsoiled white fabrics with these detergents were made by home economists of th U. S. Department of Agriculture's Research Service.

Detergents with flourescent whiteners do a good job of whitening plain cotton fabric with no added finish and a blended cotton-Dacron fabric without finish, the studies showed. On resin-finished, "wash-and-wear" cottons, the whiteners were not so successful, being more effective with some finishes than with others.

On nylon fabrics, the whiteners masked some of the yellow-ness, but they had little effect on Dacron fabrics. The detergents with the whiteners helped hold whiteness in a blended nylon-Dacron-cotton batiste which had a whitener in its resin finish. The fabric's own whiteness seemed to be washed out gradually in laundering. The detergent's whitener helped make up the loss.

Three detergents with bluing and other coloring added had some whitening effect on a finished nylon-Dacron-cotton batiste, but little or no effect on the whiteness of other nylon and Dacron fabrics. These detergents do not improve whiteness in cottons.

Cottons save you time and money

Wash-and-wear cottons save you time and money. If you figure your time at $1 an hour, it will cost you $16 to launder an untreated shirt before it wears out, this amount plus the cost of the shirt equals about $19.95. Yet only about $2 worth of time will be needed to care for the treated shirt. Even if the wash-and-wear shirt costs $5, it is least expensive in the long run.

Burley Varieties for 1961

It is expected that Burley 21, Ky. K by 10 and Burley 37 will be the main varieties produced this year. Burley 37 should be grown only where it is known that Black Shank is a problem.

The characteristics of the newest varieties are:

Ky. 9. A stand-up high-yielding variety of good quality. Broader leaves than Burley 21. Holds bottom leaves well. Slightly later maturing than Burley 21.

Ky. 10. Introduced for 1961. A rather short, compact, stand-up, high-yielding good quality variety with more leaves than Ky. 16. A small percentage of slow-growing plants with numerous closely placed rootlets. A rather late-maturing variety.

Burley 21. Extreme stand-up, good yielding variety of high-quality leaf. Some crops tend to have narrow leaves. Lones bottom leaves under a wide range of conditions.

Burley 37. A variety moderately resistant to black shank. A better burley type than Burley 11A or Burley 11B. A fair-yielding broad-leaf, stand-up type. Matures uniformly. Quality good.

JOHN WATTS

The Library Of Congress

A committee researcher who needs the history of social welfare legislation to draft a report on a medical care bill . . . A Congressman who needs information for a constituent . . . A graduate student writing a thesis on some obscure Latin American poetry. All these and several hundred others, students and teachers, researchers and tourists, daily converge by phone or foot or mail upon the Library of Congress, a two building structure which occupies 26 acres of choice real estate atop Capitol Hill, and which has been Presidents and Congressmen come and go since 1800.

Its History

Ninety seven years after the Library was created by an act of Congress its present main building was completed, in those years. It was gutted by the fires of British invasionary troops and again destroyed by a fire in the Capitol in 1851. On its 270 miles of bookshelves rest the first draft of the Gettysburg Address, the personal papers of almost every President, the first copyrighted motion picture film, the codes of every known legal system since man first recorded his laws, the Gutenberg Bible and a rough draft by Thomas Jefferson of the Declaration of Independence. The Library boasts the world's most comprehensive law library, its own printing shop, the national copyright office, and a legislative reference service which answers from 300 to 500 questions a day from Congressmen and their staffs.

Its Operation

The Library is governed by a Joint Committee made up of subcommittees from the House and Senate. Congressional appropriations, gifts from individuals, foundations, and other government agencies support the Library, and enable it to offer to the public the resources of what is probably the largest library in the world with collections numbering some 39 million items. As a contributor to the cultural life of Washington, the Library offers concerts and recitals, poetry readings and string quartets and possesses an acoustically perfect auditorium and music hall.

The Library of Congress, created by and for Congress has proved to be the most useful and appreciated public building in a city overflowing with national monuments and historic shrines. Every day it proves itself a agacity of the first Congressmen who began it with 6,000 volumes and legislated for the purchase of such books as may be necessary for the use of Congress at the said city of Washington and for fitting up a suitable apartment for containing them."

The Library of Congress is open to the public and is extensively used. Its many facilities have through the years contributed greatly to the educational and social advancement of our country. Anyone visiting Washington will be richly rewarded by visiting the Library of Congress.

Today's Thought From The Past

"The truth often may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it." Thomas Jefferson, First Inaugural Address.

TODAY'S MEDITATION FROM THE UPPER ROOM

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 23

Read Romans 11: 1-6

He fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? (Acts 9: 4.)

When I was a pastor in Lapland, a man stopped me on the street one day and asked to talk with me. We went to my home. He told me how God had spoken to him during a hike in the mountains. He told of his sins and of his decision to begin a new life. 'Let us go down to the church altar and pray,' he suggested, after he had told his story.

As we entered the church, he looked up toward the ceiling and said, "I worked here as a carpenter when this church was built. Because I hated the church then and didn't like seeing this building constructed, I said more curses than there are nails in this building."

He was truly converted and born again. From being a denier and persecutor, he became a faithful and conscientious member of the church. As long as he lived, he remained a devout Christian, rejoicing in the Lord and always willing to serve Him.

PRAYER: Lord Jesus, Thou canst convert a persecutor and make of him a follower. Reveal today Thy power to change the hearts and minds of those who these days are astray. Grant us courage to witness to Thee and to guide others to find in Thee forgiveness of their sins. In Thy blessed name we pray. Amen.

What About Being 'Chubby'?

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "I have always read your articles in the paper, but one of your recent columns set me to thinking. I am what people call 'chubby'. I'm not really fat, but I do have troubles in trying to learn just how to handle my difficulty. Believe it or not, I like boys, and yet they seem as though I don't exist. I've tried a diet, but it never worked. Someone is always laughing at me. It gets very tiresome, of course, but just what can I do to get boys to take me?"

OUR ANSWER: A "chubby" girl has two choices, neither is easy, but things worth having seldom come without effort. She can (1) lose the extra poundage or (2) learn to live with it.

In the matter of going on a diet, it is wise to consult the family doctor. He can set up an eating and exercise regimen that will bring about weight reduction in a safe and healthy manner.

(2) If, on the chubby I'm not going to worry about it. I'm going to develop my personality and make new friends just the same.

Telephone Talk

by CHARLES A. HARRIS
Your Telephone Manager

BORN IN FEBRUARY? You're in good company. So were such "greats" as George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson, Charles Lindbergh and Babe Ruth—to mention only a few.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, another Great American whose birthday comes in March, was spurred on to invent the telephone through his interest in helping deaf persons. We think Mr. Bell would be happy to know about a recent development of Bell Laboratories—the electronic larynx which makes speech possible to those who have lost their larynxes and ability to speak. The electronic larynx is available to those who need it at just what it costs to produce. For more information, inquire at our Business Office.

JUST BECAUSE YOU WANT TO . . . is a good enough reason to pick up the phone and enjoy a Long Distance visit. Someone you've been missing—youngsters off at school, a relative who lives far away. Long Distance rates are low with extra bargains after 6 p.m. and on Sundays. Why not call tonight—Just because you want to?

CASTLE IN SPAIN, ANYONE? A turreted, storied castle in Spain, built in the 14th century, is for sale because the nearest telephone is two kilometers away. Its owners will part with this old landmark for $4,000 because that is how much they need to build a telephone exchange. The price is right if you have the money and want to buy a castle, but think how lonely you'd be without a telephone!

Cawood Calls BASKETBALL

by Cawood Ledford

Hope Springs Eternal

Recently, on a trip through the Southeastern Conference, a basketball coach told me, "The league is better balanced this year. The rest of us have narrowed the gap between ourselves and Adolph, and anybody can win this thing this season." The gap the speaker referred to was that margin that usually appears between Adolph Rupp's Kentucky Wildcats and the rest of the SEC teams. For many years Kentucky ruled the roost. Until last season the Wildcats had never lost two conferences in a row. This season it is almost sure to be the third straight time that the Cats have failed to cop the crown.

But more than the other SEC teams rising to Kentucky's stature, it seems to me Kentucky has slumped to the calibre of the rest of the league. That 1961 calibre is not good. After winning the NCAA in 1958, Kentucky lost in the first round of the 1959 tournament. Last season, Georgia Tech won only one game in NCAA competition.

Mississippi State, the SEC leader at present, is eight and three against non league opponents. But it's hardly impressive when you read their schedule. Teams like Southwest Louisiana, Union of Tennessee, Spring Hill, and Delta State . . . Their three losses came when they stepped into decent competition against Southwest Conference clubs.

Tulane, which whipped Kentucky this season, was trounced by 21 points by Western Kentucky. LSU, though winning victories over both Kentucky and Vandy, was humiliated by 19 points at the hands of the U of L Cardinals.

The entire Southeastern Conference is mediocre.

But even worse, the SEC hasn't been sending its best team into post season play. The last time the winner went to the NCAA was in 1958, the year Kentucky won the grand prize. In 1959, the Wildcats made the trip only because SEC Champion Mississippi State turned down the bid because of the probability of having to play against Negroes. The Cats were SEC runners-up, and got the nod. They lost to Louisville in their first game of the NCAA.

Last year Auburn won the conference crown, but the Plainsmen were sitting out an NCAA imposed penalty for illegal recruiting in football, and second place Georgia Tech made the trip. They got by only one opponent.

This year Mississippi State looks like a sure thing to win the SEC. But it's almost as sure a bet the Maroons will elect to jetp aside because of the racial issue, and let the second place finisher journey to the NCAA Tournament. For the third straight year second best from the Southeastern Conference will represent the league.

But the man was right about
