Little Rock

by Mrs. Perry Vice

A very interesting surprise program in the form of "This is Your Life" honoring Brooks Hinkle, principal of the Little Rock school and State Representative, was presented Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 18, in celebration of his birthday anniversary at the chapel hour in the school auditorium.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Clayton Florence, P.T.A. president and represented the high lights of the honoree's life. The specials events were dramatized by students dressed in costumes in keeping with each event portrayed. Special music and songs were under the direction of John Gilkey, Bourbon County Music Director, which made a beautiful play of lasting memory. Phases represented—Place and time of birth, 1st grade student Davis McClam, dressed as an infant. Second; Age 6 School entrance. Larry Campbell 2nd grade. Mary Allen Florence and Beth Trent played the part of two older neighbor children who would stop for the little boy and take him to the Burris school, a one room school that use to be a part of the Bourbon county school system.

Third phase. High school and College graduation from Eastern State Teachers College, Richmond and University of Kentucky, Lexington. Billy Florence, 3rd grade student with Cap and Gown represented the graduate.

Fourth; Surveyor: State Spot Checker. Pat Hamilton 4th grade.

Fifth; marriage to Miss

Projects Claim State 4-H Awards

Three high school seniors and one college freshman represented Kentucky in recreation, safety, garden and tractor competitions at the National 4-H Club Congress held recently in Chicago.

Janet Like

Fred Carter

Tommy Goebel

Billy Smathers

They are Janet Like, 17, of Kirksey; Fred Carter, 17, of Hartford; Tommy Goebel, 18, of Taylorsville; and Billy Smathers, 18, of Sharpsburg.

Miss Like, winner of the recreation trip award, is a junior leader. She always encouraged members to combine activities. One of her techniques was to close each project session with a social.

As an example, when the girls clothing projects were completed, they gave a tea and fashion show for their mothers. At Christmas they exchanged good grooming gifts and learned new games for home parties.

Photos were specially planned, such as a Luau, where each girl brought an Hawaiian dish she had prepared. Miss Like also helped her local 4-H Club sponsor and finance a recreation youth center for two consecutive summers.

Young Carter held virtually every office in his local club in eight years with 4-H. His 4-H record is nearly. He not only won a number of 4-H honors, but found time to compile an impressive list of scholastic awards.

He has applied his safety knowledge to projects in sheep, baby beef, swine, crops and yard improvements. In his safety projects, Carter found and corrected numerous hazards at home, often helped neighbors and relatives.

Goebel, the garden expert, is president of his county teenage club and leader for a beginning electric project. He has completed projects in driving, tractor and safety and earned him honors, too.

Among his many previous awards in gardening have been four years as county champ, three as district and three with state blue ribbons.

Much of his produce was used by the family. The remainder was sold to finance his education at the University of Kentucky.

The state 4-H tractor award went to Smathers County 4-H president and junior leader. He started his 4-H project work in the 4-H nine years ago as a small but earnest worker, raising 11 orphan pigs.

His practical and skill in operating a tractor has paid off on the Smathers' farm.

Sponsors of the Chicago trips for these young people were John Deere (recreation), General Motors (safety), Allis-Chalmers (garden), and tractor, Standard Oil Co. (Ky.).

THE Golden Years

By THOMAS COLLINS

Buy A Retirement Home Early for Easy Change

HERE is a pattern of retirement that usually works.

Take it, apply it to the part of the country you like best, modify a corner here and there, and the Golden Years will be within your reach.

The pattern comes from a lady: "Three summers ago," she says, "my husband and I were spending our vacation in Colorado, visiting relatives. We were still six years short of retirement, but my husband decided that while we were in Colorado we should begin looking for a retirement home. He wanted a small piece of land, wanted it north of Denver, and wanted it on a river and near the mountains.

"I almost broke into tears. We had been living in a lovely suburb back east for 25 years. We had a modest home and many friends. I was happy. Anyway, when we had moved from the city to the suburbs I had said this was as far from civilization as I'd ever go. . . .

The husband persisted and went looking. He found what he wanted. "And I knew when I saw it," says the wife, "that it was for me, too."

It was two acres of land on a black-top road, with a river in back and the mountains in the distance. It was 14 miles from the town of Longmont, an hour's drive from Denver. It was a mile from stores.

"We have managed to get back to Colorado twice a year since we bought our place," the wife continues, "and this past summer, with retirement still three years off, we were able to rent in the lower level of the house we are building and install some modern plumbing. Next summer we hope to pass up the motel where we have been staying on our visits and move into our home and rough it.

"There are other homes along our road. Some of the people are in our age bracket, some are retired and all are busy. We renew our friendships with them every time we go back. . . .

The wife says she and her husband will not be concerned with changes of weather when finally they can move into their retirement home. "We won't have to book traffic or punch a time clock. We'll all it out, cozy and warm."

Here is why this sort of retirement pattern works:

1. A new home takes some getting used to, especially if it's far away and if you are of retirement age. Six years is not too long for this. Six years before retirement is better than six years after, because you're more interesting to the natives then.

2. Getting some roots in the ground in the spot you have chosen for retirement—such as buying a one land or starting on a house—gives you a magnet that keeps drawing you to the spot. Many retired people who should move from their old homes, and would be happier if they did, never do it because they have built no magnets and are afraid of the unfamiliar.

buys the electricity to run my Gold Medallion Home 24 hours
"Just 15 minutes of my wages is enough to pay the cost of a whole day's electricity for our home," says Jim Reed, of Simpsonville, Ky. "And it's a Gold Medallion Home. With electric heating, too!" Of all the electrical appliances they have in their home, Mrs. Reed says her washer and dryer save her the most time. "That dryer would be the last appliance to leave this house," she vows. Mrs. Reed is pictured at left with her daughter Cissy, age 5.

Kentucky Question Box

UK QUESTION-ANSWER SERVICE

Because Kentucky's population has not kept pace with the nation, the state will lose one vote in the House of Representatives. What was the greatest number of representatives that Kentucky had in the past?

From 1832 till 1840, Kentucky had 13 votes in the House. Thus, the state ranked fifth in House representation, tied with Tennessee and North Carolina.

How did Kentucky got its name?

Like many states, Kentucky has a name with an Indian origin. It is a derivation of " Us-ki-an-nuk-ki" or "Ken-teh-ten." State historians are divided as to its meaning but it is generally translated as "the dark and bloody ground." Other translations offered are "river of blood," the land of growing cane," "the place of meadow," "the hunting ground", and "land of tomorrow."

What was the deepest oil well drilled in Kentucky?

The deepest depth of wells drilled in Kentucky is a little more than 1,000 feet. The deepest in the state was drilled in 1959 near Inez. It was drilled to a depth of 13,172 feet, or about two and one-half miles deep.

How much coal does Kentucky produce yearly?

In 1958, the latest year for which figures are available, Kentucky produced more than 66 million tons of coal with a cash value of over $289 million. Kentucky ranks third in the nation in coal production.

Who was Lincoln County named after?

Lincoln, one of the three original counties in Kentucky formed in 1780, was named after General Benjamin Lincoln, a distinguished Virginia officer of the Revolution.

(Readers who have questions about Kentucky are invited to send them to Public Relations Department, University of Kentucky, Lexington, UK staff members, experts in various fields, will supply answers for publication in this newspaper. A postal card may be used for submitting your question. Your name will be committed by request.)

Kentucky derives its name from an old Indian word which the exact meaning is unknown. The most popular translations are "the meadow land", "the land of tomorrow", and "the dark and bloody ground".
