CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The mental nature of fatigue will be explained at Christian Science services Sunday in a Lesson-Sermon on the subject "God the Preserver of Man."

Isaiah's comforting assurance of divine strength will be read from the Bible (Isa. 40): "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

A correlative selection from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states in part (p. 217): "The scientific and permanent remedy for fatigue is to learn the power of Mind over the body or any illusion of physical weariness, and so destroy this illusion, by matter cannot be weary and heavy-laden."

The Golden Text is from the first chapter of Joshua: "Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whitherso ever thou goest."

The home garden

By Hubert Davis, Garden Specialist
UK Cooperative Extension Service

LEXINGTON, KY.—Are bugs bothering your vegetable garden? Insects are giving even more trouble than usual this year and they may rob you of vegetable yields and further delay harvest unless you protect your garden against them.

Gardens are late because of the late spring. You'll want to use the right chemicals for insect and disease control to keep your yields as high as possible. Spray or dust your vegetables as soon as they show through the ground and continue spraying or dusting every 7 to 10 days until the crop is harvested. Use DDT, Malathion or Methoxychlor for insect control. Many sprays and dusts containing one or a combination of these chemicals are on the market.

Here's a tip for protecting young transplants when they are set in the garden. Mix 2 tablespoons DDT in 1 gallon of water and dip the tops of the plants in this solution before you set them. This takes care of your first spraying. Newly set transplants may be killed by insects during their first 24 hours in the ground unless protected by chemicals.

You'll also want to protect your vegetables against disease damage by spraying them every 7 to 10 days. Tenb or maneb is recommended for protection against the blights and rots that attack home gardens. Sprays are better than dusts for disease control as rain washes off dusts more easily.

Finally, remember that all these chemicals are poison so handle them with care. Follow carefully the manufacturers' directions given on the label.

Iron in wash water causes egg spoilage

LEXINGTON, KY. — Does washing cause eggs to spoil more quickly? This question has bothered egg producers for years since washing eggs seems to cause quicker spoilage in some cases but not in others. A recent discovery helps solve this mystery, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Eggs washed in water that contains a lot of iron spoil more quickly than those washed in water that has a low iron content, researchers with the USDA's Agricultural Research Service have found. This may be the reason that washing eggs sometimes seems to cause spoilage, and at other "" has no bad effects. Water used when the eggs spoil faster probably contains at lot of iron.

Research showed that iron in wash water can reverse the action of an egg's conalbumin—the iron-binding protein in egg white. The conalbumin normally protects eggs from a certain kind of bacteria that causes spoilage. The excess iron can affect the conalbumin so that it is no longer gives this protection.

Besides the laboratory findings, field tests at several egg farms gave more proof of the effect of too much iron on eggs. In one farm, spoilage was 6 percent or less. the eggs were washed in well water containing less than 1 part per million of soluble iron. At another farm, spoilage climbed to 6 percent a few weeks after eggs were washed; at this farm, well water was used that contained 5 to 10 parts per million of iron.

Some $20 million is lost each year due to spoilage of shell eggs eggs sold fresh. The common practice on most egg farms is to machine-wash all eggs—not just dirty ones—to avoid sorting. Using water that has a high iron content helps account for much of the spoilage loss.

Of every $20 you spend on groceries, $1.50 to $2 goes for packaging—to keep the food in good condition and to draw your attention to the product. Sometimes the package may cost as much as the actual food it contains.

Farm Facts

JUNE IS DAIRY MONTH. All over the United States June is recognized at DAIRY MONTH. It is a period when the public's attention is called to the importance of milk and milk products, both in the diet of the people, and in the economics of the country. It is also an appropriate time for dairymen, themselves, to reflect upon their problems of producing and marketing milk efficiently. The farm value of milk produced on Kentucky farms in 1960 was approximately $100,000,000, with 84 per cent of it being sold and the remainder consumed on the farms. Added to the farm value are such additional inputs as hauling, processing and distributing, the total of which makes dairying one of the most important enterprises in the state, both as to number of people employed and retail value of the product.

Kentucky is in an excellent position to expand its dairy industry. It already ranks fourth among the states as a producer of American cheese and third in the production of whole dried milk. The new milk equalization plant, recently built by the Kyanna Cooperative Milk Producers Association in Louisville, is one of the most modern in the country and will facilitate the movement of Grade A milk from this area to distant markets. Other important Grade A plants serve other sections of the state.

During recent years the number of milk cows in the United States has decreased 30 per cent but in Kentucky the reduction has been only 14 per cent. On the other hand increase in average production per cow in Kentucky has not kept pace with the increase in the country as a whole. The average production in Kentucky is estimated as 4910 pounds as compared to 7,004 pounds for the United States Since World War II production per cow in Kentucky has increased 25 per cent but for the United States the increase has been 49 per cent. Many of Kentucky's better dairymen produce 12 to 14 thousand pounds per cow each year.

Because the average production per cow is such an important factor in the cost of production and efficiency of the business every Kentucky dairyman should endeavor to increase the yield per cow to at least the National average. To do this would require an improvement in at least two categories. One, improvement in the herds themselves, through better breeding, culling and culling; and two, improvement in feeding, especially as it relates to the quality of pastures, hay and silage. Although there are other important factors, concentration on these two would go a long way toward making dairying in this state an even more profitable enterprise than it is now.

High temperatures or long cooking makes cheese tough and stringy, so use low temperatures when cooking cheese. To prevent curdling, blend cheese into a smooth sauce before adding to other ingredients. Or add cheese to other ingredients in small bits.

Colored lamp shades should be used with caution, they may change the entire atmosphere of the room which you have planned under daylight conditions.
