This County's Economy

We realize the full impact of what Governor Bert Combs has done for Nicholas County residents as a whole probably isn't apparent to everyone.

But to our recollection—it is the first time since 1935 that the state government has done something for the community as a whole. Sure in the intervening years this man or that woman has been awarded a "plum" for their loyalty to the cause, "political that is", but the Governor's guarantee of a new rural secondary road between U. S. 68 and Ky. 22 and the converting of the highway fill into a dam for a lake at an estimated cost of $100,000, will have in the years to come a tremendous impact on this County's economy.

With the building of a 150-acre lake, will come people seeking recreation in its many forms—some like boating, others fishing, and many just peace and quite out away from the hubub of the city. Residents of Nicholas County will benefit from the influx of tourists to "the side of its life that is this part of the state."

More than $100,000 will be spent by the local non-profit organization in developing this 742-acre resort. Many sacrifices will have to be made, many persons will be asked to purchase stock (non-profit sharing) in the corporation. Others will purchase stock and lots and many will be called upon to donate time, money and effort—YOUR HELP IS NEEDED NOW!

Our thanks is extended to Governor Combs, and the many other state officials who aided the local committee, J. O. Matlick, Commissioner of Construction and Chairman of the Lake Development Committee; Henry Ward, Highway Commissioner; Ted Marcum, Rural Highway Commissioner; Minor E. Clark, Commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Many local persons deserve the Community's thanks. A few whose tenacious efforts brought the lake into being are: Dorsey Watkins, Nicholas County Fish and Game Club president; William T. Straw, County Agent; Charles M. Cox, County Attorney; these men, and many other Nicholas Countains are to be commended for their unselfish devotion to the lake project.

Somebody has said it is a lot less work and worth more money to pick tourists than corn.—The Casey County News

100 YEARS AGO

Lincoln, Cabinet Plan For Battle at Bull Run

By Lon K. Savage

Abraham Lincoln called his cabinet and his top generals together 100 years ago this week and laid his cards on the table. The nation was demanding an offensive—an attack—a march for Richmond. Time was running out; the three-month's troops already had served half their time and had nothing to show for it. A Confederate force had been amassed at Manassas, 30 miles to the south. There must be a battle.

He spoke mostly to old Winfield Scott, the federal army commander, and to Brigadier General Irvin McDowell, newly appointed commander of the troops at Washington. The cabinet members, too, looked at the two soldiers, firmly behind the President's demand for action.

Scott still was reluctant. He had drawn elaborate plans for his "Anaconda," to choke the South into submission by controlling the Mississippi and blockading the coast, and now this plan was about to be discarded. McDowell, too, asked for more time to drill and discipline his troops.

"You are green, it is true," Lincoln answered, "but they are green also."

Plan of Attack

So McDowell then came forth with the plan he knew Lincoln wanted to hear. He would move 30,000 men in three columns south from Washington against the Confederates lined up behind Bull Run at Manassas under General P. G. T. Beauregard. General Robert Patterson, despite his delay in moving south from Pennsylvania, would see to it that the Confederate army under General Joseph E. Johnston in the Shenandoah Valley was kept busy. If the two rebel armies were kept divided, McDowell could win.

There was some discussion about Patterson's part in the campaign. His delay in moving toward the Potomac had annoyed Scott, who was considering replacing Patterson. Finally, it was decided Patterson would be kept in his post. And the plans for the Battle of Bull Run had been decided.

Lincoln left the meeting somewhat comforted. It was time for action, he felt, as the war was getting entirely too close to Washington.

Steamer Captured

Only the day before the meeting, the private steamer St. Nicholas had been captured by Confederates on the Potomac while going from Baltimore to the Nation's capital. (Unbeknownst to Lincoln, the capture had been led by a Confederate naval officer, Hunter Lewis, who disguised himself as a pretty French "madamoeiselle". His "charms" had captivated the Union men aboard the steamer before he had pulled his guns and, with other disguised Confederates aboard, had taken possession of the ship.

And only two days before the meeting, Commodore James H. Ward, commander of the federal Potomac flotilla, had been killed at Mathias Point, 30 miles south on the Potomac in an exchange of gunfire with a group of Confederates. Ward was on the bow of his steamer aiming a gun when he was hit.

In Lincoln's native Kentucky that week, however, the Union cause began to look up. Major General William Nelson, a former regular army officer, established himself in southeastern Kentucky with the purpose of enlisting infantry for federal service. Perhaps it was a violation of Kentucky's neutrality, but Nelson had a promise of 5,000 stand of arms from Lincoln, and it would not be long before Kentuckians would be drilling and training to fight against the Confederacy in the fulfillment of one of Lincoln's fondest hopes.

Next week: The United States Congress convenes.

UK QUESTION-ANSWER SERVICE

Do many out-of-state residents come to Kentucky to fish, and is the number of out-of-state fishermen increasing? B.D., Bardstown.

Yes. In 1946, Kentucky sold only 6,967 non-resident licenses. In a more recent year, 79,058 were sold to out-of-state residents. People in the populated north are more and more inclined to spend their cash and leisure time utilizing some of Kentucky's ample fishing water

How much money is spent on fishing in Kentucky?

According to a recent U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service report, the average fisherman goes fishing about 16 times each year, spending about $91 in pursuit of his hobby. Using these figures as a basis, fishermen spend about $45 million annually in Kentucky.

Can Virginia lay claim to Kit Carson since it owned the territory where he was born?

There is no dispute as to Carson's native state. He was born in Madison County, Kentucky in 1809. 17 years after Kentucky had become a state. The famous scout and Indian agent died in 1868.

A LITTLE YAPPIN'

By Nellie Crump
The Blackberry Festival.

We have all anticipated another big Blackberry Festival for a whole year now (whether we admit it or not) and you know down deep in your heart you are going to be here this time if you can possibly make it. When this is read—if you can spare the time to read it, that is—you will have the children all dunked, combed and rearin' to start by daylight. (I grew up in the days when such chores were "made ready' the night before). Next week this here Yappin' will only be history, so bring all the family, including granny and the hired man, and help make this the BEST Blackberry Festival Carlisle has even had. Eh, John D?

—Yap—

At Their Country's Call.

A pleasant surprise was waiting when I walked up to the Carlisle Drug counter a few days ago and a young man moved over to make more room—a handsome fellow that I would not have known if he had not exclaimed, "Well, hello, Miss Nellie." It was then I recognized W. C. Gaunce, the little tike, who was my neighbor such a few short years ago. Now a young man in the service of Uncle Sam, he is stationed in California and has just spent a 30-day furlough here with his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Gaunce, and sisters. One of his sisters, Miss Anna Gaunce, is also in the Service, in the Womans Corps, after several month's training as a nurse at the Nicholas County hospital, and has recently visited the family here.

—Yap—

After Forty Years Have Passed.

Had just concluded a nice afternoon nap when there came a knock at the door and I saw a smiling, attractive woman through the glass—a familiar face as of someone I knew a long time ago, but I could not call the name and she had to tell me she was Gladys Feeback, now Mrs. Collins of Rushville, Ind. Distant though we had such a pleasant hour together while her husband went up to see Oscar Shrout. Gladys spent her childhood in Carlisle and this was the second time I had seen her since she married and moved to Indiana about 40-odd years ago. Having much to catch up on, we talked at the same time and she told me she is the mother of three children and grandmother of six. A Mercury subscriber all these years, she is also a Yappin' regular and called especially to meet Bessie, she confided. She met her! Just as she rushed through the door with one neighbor's child on her hip and another one by the hand—a double header afternoon job.

Yaps—all . . .

The family is the victim of hot weather stalling—one of three infuriating troubles that can strike your car on sizzling days. Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend fights all three.

HAPPY JULY 4th?

Fight hot weather stalls with Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend. Famous 9-ingredient formula now adjusted for top performance when highways sizzle.

You can get Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend at any Shell station on your route this weekend. Read how it just might save you a lot of trouble.

Engines, like people, can suffer from heat prostration. Especially in the kind of hot and heavy traffic you may face during the weekend ahead.

Here are three infuriating troubles that are caused by excessive heat —and what Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend does to fight them.

How Super Shell fights hot weather stalls

If your engine sputters and dies on a hot day, it may have an ailment called vapor lock.

Hot weather can make certain gasolines start to boil right in the fuel line. They literally bubble. Vapor lock takes place when the bubbles choke off the fuel supply.

Shell scientists attack vapor lock by revising Super Shell's nine-ingredient formula in summer.

They reduce its volatility. This produces a Hot Weather Blend of Super Shell that's not likely to boil in your fuel line. It cuts the chances of hot weather stalls to a minimum.

How Super Shell fights hard starting

Here's what can happen when you try to re-start your car after a hot drive.

With the fan stopped and the cooling system idle, intense heat under the hood can actually make gasoline percolate in some carburetors. Just like coffee in a pot.

The gasoline spills over, floods the engine—and makes it hard to start.

Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend is formulated to stand high temperatures without percolating. You get quick starts even after a long, hard, hot drive.

How Super Shell fights rough idling

The same trouble that causes summer starting difficulties can give your car the shakes every time you stop for a traffic light.

Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend attacks both problems the same way. Its formula is adjusted so that it's in no hurry to boil and bubble. Result: smooth idling in hot weather.

Shell trouble-shooter

Your Shell dealer will be glad to prepare your car for summer driving. His trouble-shooting may save you hours of delay on the road.

And ask him to fill your tank with Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend. Then you will really be set for top performance.

Super Shell's 9 ingredients for top performance

#1 is TCP*—for power, mileage, and longer plug life.
#2 is "cat-cracked" gasoline—for power.
#3 is anti-knock mix—for knock resistance.
#4 is Alkylate to control "high-speed knock".
#5 is Butane—for quick starts.
#6 is Pentane mix—for fast warm-ups.
#7 is an "anti-icer." (Added when cold weather sets in.)
#8 is gum preventive—for clean carburetors.
#9 is Platformate for extra mileage.

*Trademark for Shell's petroleum detergent additive. Gum-free inhibitor is TCP is covered by U. S. Patent 2890215.
