Governor Combs calls state-wide Safety Conference for June 13, 14; seek ways to cope with traffic deaths

FRANKFORT (Special)—Governor Bert Combs, alarmed at the 1961 traffic count, is calling a special state-wide conference on safety methods of coping with the accidental death problem and to stimulate increased interest in accident prevention.

Proclaiming a "Governor's Safety Conference" to be held at the Phoenix Hotel in Lexington, June 13 and 14, Governor Combs said that county and city officials, civic leaders, and other interested Kentuckians will be urged to serve as delegates to the two-day meeting.

"Plans are being developed for study forums which will take up special problems," Combs said. He listed such problems as traffic law enforcement, public education for safety, traffic courts, water safety, fire safety, driver training, and driver licensing.

"Some 50 to 100 outstanding Kentuckians will be asked to serve on a special Governor's Safety Advisory Committee which will meet in advance of the conference for the purpose of discussing safety problems with Kentucky Department of Public Safety officials and developing a general plan of action to be submitted to the conference June 13 and 14," Governor Combs said.

State Safety Commissioner Glenn Lovern said that his department will be in charge of conference planning and operations, and pointed out that he is designating Lieutenant Judson Edwards, who is Department of Public Safety Public Information Officer, as Governor's Safety Conference coordinator.

"We are extremely concerned over the rising fatality rate and sincerely hope that all interested organizations and individuals throughout Kentucky will cooperate with this Safety Conference a progressive step toward greater safety in Kentucky," Lovern said.

"The conference will 'serve a two-fold purpose of stimulating greater interest in safety throughout the Commonwealth, and also bringing Kentuckians together to discuss the accident prevention problems which affect all of us," the Commissioner declared.

Lovern pointed out that a new Department of Public Safety film concerning the Division of Driver Licensing and Kentucky State Police will have its first showing at the two-day meeting.

The film was produced by Vogue Film Productions of Louisville and explains the Kentucky driver's licensing laws, point system, and financial responsibility laws. "Also included in the 10-minute color sound movie are explanations of road-rule violations which have proven especially dangerous on Kentucky highways," Lovern said.

"The film will be shown to civic groups, schools and other interested organizations," Lovern added. He emphasized that the film and a series of radio and TV announcements will be released in June.

Rock Haven entered; $65 is stolen

Thieves broke into the Rock Haven Restaurant Wednesday, early Wednesday morning, March 29th, stole the cash register, took it to a field across the road, forced it open and emptied it of its contents.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinton Caswell, owners and operators of the restaurant said the broken cash register was found in the field this morning, but the $65 it had contained Tuesday night is gone.

Nothing else was reported missing from the restaurant, which is located on the Maysville Road (U. S. 68) near here. Mr. and Mrs. Caswell said they spent Tuesday night in another part of the building, but did not hear the intruders. They said the burglary occurred some time after 3 a.m.

Entrance was gained by prying open the front door, they reported.

Series on Civil War to start next week

One hundred years ago this week, America—both those of the United States and the newly formed Confederate States—had their eyes turned toward a five-sided fortress on a small island in the middle of the harbor at Charleston, S. C.

For there, within the walls of Fort Sumter, the "irrepressible conflict" between the Northern and Southern states over states' rights and slavery was coming to a crisis that soon would explode into Civil War. Although the people had no way of knowing it, the conflict was to erupt within a week.

Century of Study

The American Civil War, which followed from April 12, 1861 through April, 1865, has captured the imagination of Americans more than any other war. Those who enjoy reading of glory, battles and romance, as well as military strategists, historians and scholars, have studied the Civil War for a century, but still the public desire to read and learn about it grows. Now, the opportunity to satisfy this appetite for information about the Civil War appears to be at hand as Americans begin a month long, four-year Civil War centennial observance.

The Mercury Message, as part of this observance, will give its readers a full and unique history of the Civil War, carried in weekly installments. Each installment will tell of the events, personalities, drama, excitement, color, significance and tragedy of the week exactly one hundred years before.

Begin the habit of reading this unusual and fascinating history next week with its first installment in this newspaper. You will find each story a dramatic and accurate account of the people, the battles and skirmishes and the little items of human behavior that made up the war. And in the process, you will find yourself absorbing much of the history of that war. If you wish, clip each installment and in four years you will have a chronological history of the war unlike any other ever published.

The Author

The author of the series is Len K. Savage, experienced newspaperman on the city desk of The Richmond Times-Dispatch and a native of that same time Confederacy. Mr. Savage, a history graduate of Cornell University who has pursued his interest in history during his professional career, has based his series largely on research in hundreds of Civil War volumes and records found in Richmond.

As you read this series, remember that exactly one hundred years ago this week, notes were being sent back and forth

Does County have tourist attractions?

Does Nicholas County have anything to attract tourists?

That's the question often received by the Division of Tourist and Travel Promotion. That is also the question that is being passed along to readers of the Carlisle Mercury.

Here's the story in full

The Division of Tourist and Travel Promotion at Frankfort, during the peak season, gets about 5000 requests a week for tourist information. A would-be traveler to Kentucky will say something like this:

"We are planning to visit Kentucky during June, and would like to stay at one of your state parks. Can you give us any information on what to see in the various counties we shall pass through?"

The Frankfort office has at one time details on such famous attractions as Natural Bridge,

House-to-house canvass for bug fight funds

The Nicholas County Jaycees have announced they will conduct a town wide house to house canvass to raise funds for a mosquito control program.

It is hoped that each home will contribute $1 or more toward this special fund. It is felt if sufficient funds are secured a very effective program can be set up that will assure all our residents a more comfortable summer without getting for the use of yards and porches.

Plans call for canvassing the week of April 17th.

The city council appropriated $100 toward this fund last month.

Let's all support this worthwhile project.

Police Judge Joe Clay has filed for reelection.

B. J. Alexander has filed for election to police judge subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

Mayor Files

Mayor William Power filed for reelection Wednesday, subject to the action of the Democratic primary May 23, 1961.

The Mayor announced that he would head a ticket with four candidates for councilmen made up of the following: James Mann, Emory Hollar, W. H. Frey and Claude Darrell. This ticket will support Teddy Poe and William Harper, candidates for town councilmen, who have filed individually for the primary, according to Mayor Power.

$1,036 in public assistance to Nicholas County

Kentucky's public assistance recipients received a total of $5,107,576 in February, Commissioner of Economic Security Earle V. Powell of Frankfort, has announced.

Of this amount, $15,036 went to Nicholas Countians who are on the public assistance rolls. In February 1960, recipients here received $13,051.

Powell said the statewide total for the month represents an increase of $623,165 over the money paid by his department last year.

He said the increased payments this year resulted from a larger budget, financed largely by sales tax receipts.

Public assistance payments the state made in four categories. In this county, the aged (65 or older) received an average payment of $50.87; the families with one or more dependent children received an average payment of $90.89; the needy blind received an average payment of $52.25, and the permanently and totally disabled received an average payment of $49.09.
